NEW DISORDERS STIR ITALY

Grange Attacks Food Price Rollback

RAPS LABOR'S DEMANDS AS INFLATIONARY

Bowles, New Head of OPA, Says He'll Resist All Pressure Groups.

PROMISES EXPOSURE

Farm Organization Calls For Lower Standard of Living and Some Subsidies.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The national grange today countered organized labor's latest demand for a rollback of food prices by declaring that such action would result in "further serious curtailment of our food supply."

Heads of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations told President Roosevelt last week that they would demand general wage increases unless food prices are rolled back to Sept. 15, 1942, levels.

Chester Bowles, the new general manager of the office of price administration, announced upon taking office yesterday that he would resist "any and all selfish pressures" on the OPA's program. He promised the American people the true facts of unfair pressures in "clearly understandable language."

Charts of the new point costs, covering both blue and red stamps, as fixed by the Office of Price Administration will be found on page 11, today.

The executive committee of the Grange, speaking for more than 8,000 farm organizations in 37 states, said in a statement that the food supply "already has suffered because of unsound, impractical and restrictive regulations by OPA."

It called labor's demands inflationary, and said the one way to prevent inflation was to close the "inflationary gap" the difference between living costs and workers' income—which is estimated to be increasing at the rate of about $2,000,000,000 per month.

The Grange committee said Americans have increased their food standards by one-third since the start of the war, and indicated that instead of higher wages

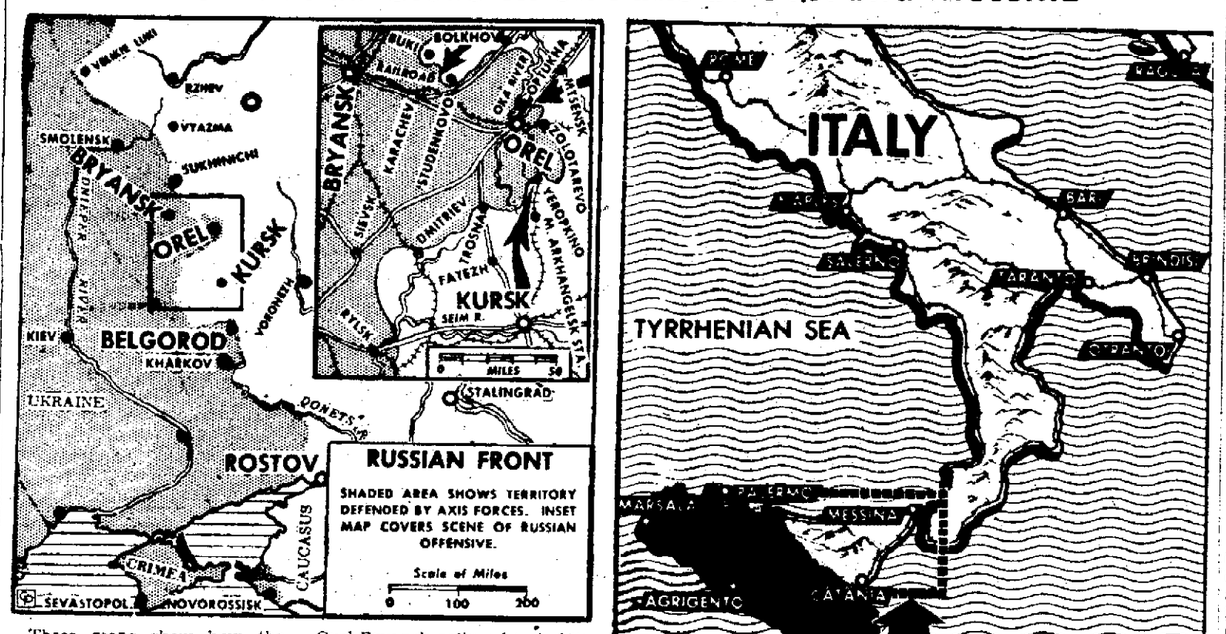
How Allies Close In on Axis at Orel and Messina



These maps show how the Allies are putting the squeeze on the Axis in the European theater of war. At left the large map shows the general outline of the Orel front; the inset gives a close-up of the same front indicating how the Russians are driving to cut the Orel-Bryansk railroad to isolate the Nazi Orel base. At right, the top map shows how the Axis is again caught in a death triangle in northeast Sicily; the smaller map below indicates how U. S., British and Canadian troops are compressing one side of the triangle.

Response Big on HOLC Program for House Remodeling

While the Federal Housing administration's war worker housing project yesterday was reported to have brought little response from property owners planning remodeling jobs, it has been a different story with the Home Owners Loan corporation's similar project in the city.

Twenty-three applications for priorities for materials to convert one or two-family units into larger ones have already been submitted under the HOLC plan, C. D. Huff, Mansfield realtor in charge of property negotiations, said today.

Huff estimated that nearly 50 more applications for remodeling projects are being prepared to turn in to the HOLC which is a unit of the National Housing administration.

Under the HOLC plan, handled in Richland county by the Huff agency in Mansfield and S. H. Knapp in Shelby, buildings which can be made into living quarters

HOUT TO AGAIN DIRECT DRIVE

War Chest Campaign Chairman For '43 To Manage Opening In October.

Fred Hout, who successfully managed the Mansfield Community and War Chest drive for 1943, will head the 1944 campaign, it was announced today.

Hout was named chairman of the drive which will be conducted the latter part of October at a joint meeting of the executive and admissions and distribution committees of the War Chest yesterday afternoon.

In announcing the drive, war chest officials said no definite figure had yet been set as the goal. The committee to work with Hout will be set up in the near future, they said.

Henry G. Brunner, president of the war chest, re-appointed three members of the budget committee at the meeting yesterday. They are W. L. Miller, Mrs. Milo Hiebler, and L. N. Hoffman who will serve three-year terms.

John W. Graham, war chest treasurer, reported that $123,450 of the $164,500 pledged for 1943 has been collected. An appeal from the American War Community Services to be included in the 1944 budget was refused.

Following the War Chest meeting the executive committee of the Community Fund met yesterday. An appeal from the Salvation Army for $1,200 for building repairs referred from the War Chest was refused on the grounds that the community chest only raises operating ex-

SWAP PUNCHES

LONDON —(U.P.)— Capt. Alec Stratford Cunningham-Reid and Oliver Locker-Lampson, conservative members of parliament, exchanged blows outside the commons chamber today after Locker-Lampson had raised the issue of the other's absence from Great Britain during the air blitz of 1940.

Mansfielders Get 45-Day Gas Suspension for Derby Trip

The Office of Price Administration today had suspended the right of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Slattery, 37 Sturges avenue, to buy gasoline for 45 days after finding them guilty of "flagrantly violating the gas regulations" in a motor trip to the Kentucky derby last May. Slattery is purchasing agent for the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company.

At the same time, OPA Commissioner Dennis F. Dunlavy at Cleveland exonerated four other Mansfielders who rode to Louisville, Ky., from Cincinnati with Slattery of charges of having conspired with Slattery in violating gas rationing regulations.

Making the trip from Cincinnati to Louisville and back to Mansfield in the Slattery car were W. J. Spreng, chairman of the Richland county gas rationing panel; T. R. Sammons, ex-officio member of the panel; C. A. Hines, president of Farm Tools, Inc., and Edward W. Loughridge, Mansfield insurance dealer.

Although Mrs. Slattery, owner of the car used on the trip, did not go along with her husband to Kentucky, her right to buy gas was suspended too because testimony at an OPA hearing in Cleveland showed that her basic "A" gasoline coupons were used and she must have known of the violation, Dunlavy said.

It was brought out at the hearing that Slattery met the other

ASKS DELAY

Brown Calls on Ickes To Hold Up on Gasoline Changes.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Congressman Clarence J. Brown, Blanchester, O., Republican, today called upon Petroleum Administrator Harold Ickes for the second time not to take any further action in gasoline rationing until congress reconvenes and Brown's congressional committee investigating further gasoline restrictions has the opportunity to consult with Ickes.

Brown made public a letter from Ickes which assured him that according to an agreement he and the members of his committee would be given advance notice before any definite change in policy is made.

According to Brown's understanding of the agreement, Ickes was to make no change of policy until after he had met again with the committee and had presented information substantiating the need for a change in gasoline rationing outside the eastern area.

LOSING HOPE FOR CLIMBER

Rescue Parties Get No Response to Mountain Signals.

GRAND LAKE, Colo. —(U.P.)— Rescue parties began to lose hope today of finding a 22-year-old vacationer alive on the sixth day after he began climbing lofty Lindbergh peak with only a candy bar for food.

After searching the regular route to the summit of the 12,600-foot mountain, they feared Ernest Polley, jr., had been killed in a fall from a ledge. A Colorado boy, Polley was home on vacation from his work in a Cleveland aluminum plant.

Signal fires lighted at scattered points on the peak last night failed to evoke any call for help from the youth. He was clad lightly.

FDR DRAFTS WAR REPORT FOR NATION

Expected to Review Both Home and Battle Fronts In 9:30 P. M. Talk.

CHEER, CAUTION MINGLE

President Hints Beforehand There'll Be No Backdown on Surrender Terms.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Against a backdrop of Allied might pounding forward on all major fronts and the political demise of Benito Mussolini, President Roosevelt drafted today his first war report to the American people in five and a half months.

The President will broadcast for half an hour on all networks tonight at 9:30 o'clock, Eastern War time, and the White House labeled the address of "major importance."

Mr. Roosevelt told his press radio conference yesterday he would talk on the war, and he made it plain he considered war activities at home and in the actual theaters of combat of parallel importance, a hint on the scope of tonight's speech.

He was in a position to paint a glowing picture in the Mediterranean, the Pacific, Russia and from the skies over Europe.

But words of caution appeared in order from the chief executive on what has been happening here to wages, prices, manpower, internal disputes in the government, as well as on an admitted possibility that war production goals for 1943 may not be attained.

Not since Feb. 12, when he spoke at a dinner of the White House Correspondents' association, has the chief executive presented a comprehensive review of the war to his countrymen. Allied armies then still were trying to exterminate enemy resistance in Tunisia, and the president promised that the consequences of victory there would be "actual invasions of the continent of Europe."

Obliquely, Mr. Roosevelt indicated yesterday there would be no receding from the Allied policy of unconditional surrender, declar-

Milan Revolt Flares, Mobs Cry: 'Liberty'

Inmates Mutiny, Burn Prison; Naples Also Scene of Fights; Americans Capture Cefalu In Drive Along Sicilian Coast.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—A Reuters dispatch quoted an Italian news agency broadcast today as announcing that the Fascist party was dissolved yesterday at the first meeting of the new Italian cabinet.

BULLETIN

STOCKHOLM—(INS)—Germany is determined to build a defense line along the Po river valley in northern Italy as a precaution against the approach of an Allied army of invasion, reports reaching Stockholm said today.

(By Associated Press)

A popular insurrection verging on revolution, marked by gunfire, an attempted prison break and bloodshed, was reported to have broken out at Milan in northern Italy today, according to unconfirmed advices received at the Italian frontier.

Dispatches said mobs swept the streets of Milan, birthplace of fascism, shouting:

"Liberty!"

"We want peace!"

All workers were reported to have left their jobs and the situation was described as extremely grave.

The newspaper Il Corriere della Sera reported that Fascists in the Milan suburbs barricaded themselves in buildings and fired on crowds of civilians and soldiers.

The newspaper said the fight to wipe out nests of Fascist defiance was "long, difficult and bloody," with some of the followers of ex-Premier Mussolini's regime still battling authorities.

Inmates of the great Milan prison of Cellulare mutinied and burned part of the prison in an attempted break. One prisoner was killed and many were wounded.

Bomb-torn Naples was also the scene of fights in which several were killed and wounded as the people celebrated the fall of fascism. Other cities in northern and southern Italy witnessed continuous demonstrations.

A Rome broadcast repeatedly interrupted programs to warn the people against "sensational" rumors and urged patience, declaring that it was not possible to make peace in two days.

Italy's role in the war took on a deeper tinge of mystery today amid a new flurry of peace rumors, speculation that Turkey might act as mediator, and an Algiers radio report that German troops were moving northward through Italy—possibly abandoning the Italians to their fate.

Dispatches from Bern, Switzerland, said islands of Fascist resistance, refusing to comply with the "new order" of Premier Badoglio's new regime, were holding out against Italian troops in Milan.

Uncertainty over the new government's course between peace and war produced increased signs of restlessness among the people.

Milan Fascists battled against Italian regulars for three hours during the night, it was reported, firing from windows and rooftops.

On the fighting front, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters announced that American Seventh army troops sweeping eastward toward the Axis "escape

MEDIATOR? Spellman Quits Africa, Cancels All His Plans

(By United Press)

LONDON—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York, frequently mentioned as a possible go-between for peace negotiations between Italy and the Allies, cancelled all remaining engagements in South Africa today and took off from Pretoria by plane for an undisclosed northern destination.

Spellman's sudden departure from South Africa, where he was visiting following a tour of American army camps in North Africa and the Middle East, coincided with growing reports that preliminary discussions looking toward a separate peace for Italy already have begun at Vatican City.

However, authoritative British quarters said that up to noon today (6 a. m. EWT), the Italian government had made no formal peace approaches to the Allies and no diplomatic contact had been established between the warring governments.

Prime Minister Churchill told commons that he and President Roosevelt had received no formal reply to their joint call two weeks ago to the Italian people to capitulate—"unless the disappearance of Mussolini is to be considered as his own reply to it."

Meanwhile, radio Rome was heard broadcasting early this afternoon an appeal to the Italian people not to believe "rumors about sensational events being put out by irresponsible elements with the only aim of disturbing public order."

Swiss dispatches quoted an Italian newspaper as reporting that four Fascists have been killed and 25 wounded, three severely, in riots in the northern Italian industrial center of Milan.

The latest unconfirmed report regarding Mussolini's whereabouts came from Madrid, where a neu-

Mayor Requests Council to Study Curfew Measure

Asserting that his office had received "considerable criticism because the city apparently has no curfew ordinance," Mayor W. J. Locke in a letter to city council today asked that a study be made of the need for a curfew for Mansfield young people and that council determine the time at which a curfew should become effective.

With his letter to council the mayor included one he had received from E. B. Boling, secretary of the Mansfield Public Parks association, in which the association urged a curfew to get young people off the streets and out of parks earlier at night.

"We feel that it (a curfew) will lessen greatly the juvenile delinquency in our city and are very happy to lend you and your offi-

BAN'S BACK

Anti-Pinball Ruling Virtually Restored By Court.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— A state liquor board ban against display of gambling devices by permit holders, once held unconstitutional by a Franklin county common pleas court, was virtually restored to its original status by a district appellate court ruling here.

The appellate court yesterday dismissed a declaratory judgment suit filed by Bert L. Hammontree, Toledo druggist, on grounds the state board had not threatened to revoke the druggist's beer and wine carry-out permit if he continued to exhibit a pinball machine in his store.

The court held Hammontree could not bring the judgment suit unless evidence showed an actual dispute between him and the board.

SOURS SUES

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Highway Director Hal G. Sours filed suit in Franklin county common pleas court against William F. McLain of Youngstown, a deputy registrar of motor vehicles and his surety, the U. S. Casualty Company, of Baltimore, Md., for $2,122.

Cylon Wallace, state registrar of motor vehicles, said the money was stolen from McLain's office during a robbery last year and that the court action was an attempt to obtain reimbursement through the surety firm.

'Victims' In Test Fire Rescue Almost Overcome by Smoke

When Mansfield civilian defense workers and auxiliary firemen dragged two "victims" from a "burning building" in a test drill last night they were not expecting them to be real victims.

When the first aid unit from the Ohio Public Service rescued Miss Katherine Heichel and Mrs. Sally Dunfee, air raid wardens who had volunteered to be "victims," from the building at 130 North Walnut street they found them nearly overcome with the smoke.

The volunteer victims were stationed in the engine room of the building which was filled with smoke to simulate a real fire to prevent their being choked by the smoke. But even those precautions did little good. While not overcome, they really did suffer from smoke fumes.

Arriving two and a half minutes after they received the call from Ray Ward, senior warden in the downtown district, the first aid unit went into the building and brought out the girl wardens. Finding them suffering from the smoke they applied artificial respiration to revive them.

Fire fighting apparatus arrived on the scene in two minutes to fight the "fires" set by incendiary bombs dropped by enemy planes. Flares had been placed on the roof of the building and while the first aid unit was rescuing the victims the fire fighters extinguished the flares.

During the course of the test drill several hundred people gathered to watch the first aid unit headed by James Gaff of the O. P. S. and the fire fighters.

DOUBLE: Yanks Again Loose Furious Attacks on Kiska, Wake

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Air forces of the Pacific command striking Japanese defenses with unprecedented fury, made 19 attacks on Kiska island in the North Pacific Monday and Tuesday, the navy reported today, and again raided Wake island in the central Pacific.

The 19 raids in two days announced in a navy communique raised to 40 the number of attacks which bombers and fighter-bombers have made on embattled Kiska in four days.

The island has been raided 60 times this month as airmen blasted the way for expected conquest of the enemy stronghold by American amphibious forces.

The raid on Wake island was intercepted by 25 Zero fighters but the army heavy Liberator bombers destroyed seven of the Japanese planes, probably destroyed five and damaged three others.

Four days earlier a Liberator flight had destroyed nine Zeros, probably destroyed four and damaged five out of 30 which sought to prevent a raid.

Never before had American bombs fallen on Wake island in raids so close together. Prior to the attack last Saturday American bombers had not made the 2,000

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—The first Fascist has fallen and among those who will rejoice loudest in our country are some who glibly hurl the name at others but who, themselves, have been fighting for some of the elements of fascism here. They offer them in the guise of reforms as Mussolini did to catch the devotion of the confused and soul-sick Italian people. Henry Wallace is one of them, although Mr. Wallace sincerely believes that he yields to no man in his detestation of fascism and they include, without exception, those radicals in Washington and elsewhere in President Roosevelt's following, who see possibilities in communism.

Pegler

The exploitation of public office for profit is inherent in practical fascism although it is forsworn in the book of Mussolini. His organization was a gang, not a party, and those who acquired power, from the duce himself down to his littlest heeler in a village, took their privileges and spoils from the rest of the people. We have had a parallel here in the years since 1932. Here, as in Italy during the bum's brief and easy conquest of his people, we saw mobs operating under special

Raymond Clapper's column did not arrive in time for publication today. He has advised that he may not be able to dispatch his stories for several days. They will be resumed as soon as they come through.

permission from the national government trampling down local and state law and government and terrorizing the people so that the president's followers could consolidate their position.

This is not a mere assertion. It is a historic fact, provable out of the record of the times and worse yet, the one man who was most conspicuously docile in the presence of these mobs, although repudiated by the people at the polls, was elevated to the supreme court.

It surely will not be denied that Mussolini packed the Italian courts with men who thought as he did or that this was one of the most evil steps of his regime. But who will undertake to deny that Mr. Roosevelt tried to do the same in the United States and, being thwarted one way, finally achieved his purpose otherwise in the supreme court?

As a lure to the common people, the citizens of Italy, the bum took over industry and established revolutionary controls over business so complex and tricky that jobs were created for thousands of his petty black shirts who thus acquired a stake in the system that guaranteed them a fair and easy living and gave them a sense of power over their neighbors. The employers were left the nominal control of their properties for their experience, intelligence and instinctive devotion to their careers were useful to him in keeping the show going. Here again, I see a parallel which may have escaped Mr. Wallace although it will not elude businessmen, the little fellows as well as the giants of the soulless corporations who have seen their paper-work pile up and so many activities placed under permit and license that their innate abhorrence of fascism has been aggravated by practical experience of fascism in detail.

One of the bum's strongest appeals to the people was his pretense, at least, of a deep and juicy sympathy for them in conflicts with the bosses. Here we have seen a similar display and some private properties have been taken over by the national government merely because the owners would not sign contracts with third parties on terms dictated by the government in violation of the right of contract and of simple American justice. Thus far, in the United States the government has never moved to take over the property and other assets of a union which was in the wrong in a dispute with an employer.

Mussolini got around to that by taking over the unions, bodily, and operating them. Here the union bosses have taken over the members, the American people, and are growing more and more assertive of a right which they have invented for themselves, to discipline them with taxes, fines and other punishments under government sanction. And in one great northwestern area of the country, a direct-actionist of President Roosevelt's following, Dave Beck, a man who would resent being called a Fascist, established a thorough replica of Mussolini's fascism through the power of the teamsters' union whose president, Daniel Tobin, was selected by President Roosevent to work with him in the White House as an adviser on labor and to represent his policy in an international conference with British labor.

Scornful, personalized abuse of men holding political and economic views contrary to his own was another of the bum's weapons which has been used freely here for 10 years to such effect that many such individuals now are cowed and afraid to express themselves freely on the telephone and write their opinions only in confidence or anonymously lest they be singled out for punishment or harassment by some bureau of the government.

Repudiation of pledges and debts and glorification of repudiation was Mussolini's short cut to results and soon became ours and here, as in the bum's heyday in Italy, while the people conscientiously do without and stay home, conspicuous privileged individuals consume great quantities of gasoline and travel endlessly up and down the land.

Huey Long never made a shrewder observation than his remark that if fascism came to the United States it would come disguised as anti-fascism.

GOP ROW OVER FOREIGN PLANS OUT IN OPEN

Public Charges Made That Policy Group Seeks To Split Party.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — An internal ruckus that has been brewing quietly in Republican ranks over the scope of a foreign policy declaration for 1944 was out in the open today with public charges and denials that the Republican postwar policy association aims to "split" the party by harping against peacetime "isolationists."

Officers of the association, organized recently in Chicago and New York, came to grips with Chairman Harrison E. Spangler of the Republican national committee late yesterday when they called to urge that strong foreign cooperation resolutions be presented to the party's postwar advisory council meeting at Mackinac Island, Mich., Sept. 6 and 7.

Formal statements and press conferences, sparked by an exchange of cold stares and warm remarks by publicity agents for each side, followed the closed meeting at Republican headquarters with these tangible results:

1—Deneen A. Watson, Chicago attorney and national chairman of the association, served notice his group would fight for a Republican presidential candidate and platform standing "four-square" for American participation in peace-preservation machinery. He denied his group was backing Wendell Willkie or any other specific person.

2—Spangler promised to lay the association proposals before the council and said in a formal statement:

"I am sure that Republicans, and the people as a whole, can look with confidence to the official council of 49 to help guide America towards a better world. It is composed of Republican leaders chosen at the polls by the votes of millions of Americans. They are well equipped to advise the Republican party."

3—Watson told newsmen that Spangler read to his delegation of five a letter from an unnamed westerner saying the association was trying to "split" the party. He said he did not believe Spangler himself believed the charge.

"We are trying to avoid a split, not make a split," Watson declared. "We want a foreign policy adopted that means something. We're not going to pussyfoot on it. We mean business."

FDR IRRITATED AS OWI CALLS KING 'MORONIC'

Reported To Have Ordered Probe of Broadcast That Attacked Italy Rulers.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt today is understood to have ordered an investigation of the unwarranted office of war information broadcast to Italy which called King Victor Emmanuel "the moronic little king" and labeled Marshal Pietro Badoglio a "high ranking Fascist."

The president at his news conference said that the broadcast was not authorized by himself, the state department or by Robert Sherwood, chief of OWI's overseas division and declared that he will "crack down" on the person responsible.

In some quarters it was charged that Communist sympathizers in OWI were responsible for the attack against the two new Italian leaders. This led to other charges that the government information office was attempting to foment a Communist revolution in Italy. The charges were denied by the OWI.

Quoting an imaginary "American political commentator," OWI's special broadcast which was beamed out of New York Monday said that the United States will continue the war whether Mussolini, Badoglio or "the Fascist king himself" rules Italy. The broadcast said that these were "typical unofficial reactions" to the ousting of Benito Mussolini.

Following the president's heated attack on the broadcast which he said should never have been made, it was reported that the OWI was ordered to avoid personal attacks on King Emmanuel and Marshal Badoglio.

Acting OWI Director Milton S. Eisenhower said that the broadcast was not directed specifically at Italy but was sent to England. It was admitted, however, that it could be heard in Italy.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: My friend, Morton Downey, is America's favorite tenor and one of Broadway's favorite fellows. He types with two fingers—and this is what he's typed for today.)

Morton Downey Says—

IT'S a great day for the Irish, all right, with a colleen named Kilgallen giving the green light to a divvil named Downey. "The column's all yours, me boyo," she said—so here I am, having myself a field day. Top of the mornin' to you!

The first thing I want to do is strew around a few bright green orchids. The first one goes to Dorothy, for giving me the chance to strew them around. The next couple of million go to those wonderful people who are kind enough to tune in on my radio program.

Mighty loyal listeners they are, too. There's the Civil war vet in Ohio, who writes that he's been following my career ever since I was knee-high to a cricket, and just about as noisy. A man who used to live in my home town of Wallingford, Conn., and is now making rivets for Henry Kaiser in Oregon, heard me sing at an Elks' smoker years ago, and has been writing me ever since. He says I've improved—but not much. And, oh yes, there was the girl who suffers from a lingering illness and wrote, "Oh, Morton, when I think of the pleasure your program has given me, I thank God I'm sick." And there's also the nice old gent in Terre Haute, Ind., who not only writes me three times a week, but used to phone me via long distance almost every other day. Once he called up to say, "Mr. Downey, you sang that better today than Chauncy Olcott ever did. I was crying my eyes out!"

It's amazing, and kind of wonderful, too, the interest my unseen audience takes in my welfare. All I have to do is sniffle a little, and the next mail is sure to bring enough nose-drops to drown the whole Jap fleet, and enough handkerchiefs to smother them in. Somehow word got around that I was superstitious, and yop, you guessed it, in a couple of days I was snowed under by a bunch of amulets, good-luck charms and well-wishing whatnot that has probably made me the envy of every witch doctor from the equator north. One guy in Indianapolis sent me the sixth toe of a six-toed cat, a dingus that he guaranteed would ward off anything including gremlins.

Through the letters I get, I've been able to size up pretty well what my listeners like to hear. I've experimented with so many different kinds of music, in an effort to please everybody—that sometimes I figure I ought to be billed as "The Trial and Error Troubadour." When I first started my current radio series in March, it wasn't without misgivings. For years I'd been specializing in the sweet, sentimental old-timers, and ballads which I myself love, without any violent amount of complaints. But I figured this time as different. I got at least 20 new gray hairs worrying about whether folks would still go for the gentle and unsophisticated kind of music what with jitterbugs all over the place, and jive talk rapidly replacing English as the national language. I was plenty scared, I can tell you.

* * *

I'm tickled pink to admit the joke was on me. When I gave out with a modern quickie (or a reasonably inexact facsimile thereof), the roof practically caved in. When I stuck to the typical Downey ditties, my mail changed from rash notes to mash notes. You can quote me—and a couple of million others—as saying that the sentimental ballad is here to stay, permanently. If it isn't, it's certainly giving a darn fine imitation of the man who came to dinner.

U. S. Navy Issues New Chart of The Antarctica Region

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— A new chart of Antarctica and the southern polar regions, covering 6,000,000 square miles and in preparation several years, has been issued by the hydrographic office of the navy department.

Combining all published information and much data of the area never before seen on a map, some of it collected by the U. S. Antarctic service under Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the map's creation was supervised by Comdr. R. A. J. English, who commanded the polar survey ship The Bear on Byrd's first trip to the region.

Antarctica is almost entirely within the Antarctic Circle. It has an area of nearly 6,000,000 square miles, almost equal to the combined areas of the United States and Europe. Its coastline of 14,000 miles is almost completely known, but by far the greatest part of Antarctica has never been seen by a human. Unknown coastal sections include the southwestern limits of the Weddell sea and a portion of the coast of the Roosevelt sea.

One mountain is named for Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, and a tremendous glacier has been given the name of Cordell Hull, secretary of state.

HURRICANE HITS TEXAS CITIES

Damage In Millions, One Dead as Gale Rips Through Galveston, Houston.

(By International News Service)

HOUSTON, Tex.—A terrific hurricane which struck Houston, Galveston, and surrounding communities left in its wake today damage estimated at from one to two millions dollars and more than 100 persons injured.

Streets of the two cities were flooded and houses and other buildings were demolished by the gale, which reached an unofficial velocity of more than 130 miles an hour. Communications throughout the area were disrupted.

Only one fatality was recorded, that of a five-year-old Houston boy, as residents began taking stock today of the destruction wrought.

Houston authorities estimated that 100 persons were injured by flying debris and other mishaps during the height of the hurricane, but an accurate count awaited the restoration of telephone service.

Power was on only intermittently last night in Houston. Street lights flickered on and off.

Plate glass windows in the business sections of Galveston and Houston were shattered, and information trickling in from nearby towns told of similar damage.

Trees were uprooted. Telephone and telegraph poles fell leaving a maze of broken, tangled wires, as repair crews struggled to maintain service.

INFANT DIES

Son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Moore To Be Buried Today.

Harry Thomas More, six-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Carey L. Moore, 105 North Franklin avenue, died Tuesday at Mansfield General hospital.

Funeral services were to be conducted today at 3 p. m. at the home with Rev. S. R. Parrett, pastor of Gospel Center, officiating. Burial was to be in Mansfield cemetery.

While trying to be good scouts for the day and do their good deed, Mrs. J. W. Graham and H. L. Ackerman ran into a little difficulty. They were trying to build a bridge at the new Girl Scout camp, and both were pulling on a rope fastened to a log which was to be moved into position. Everything went all right until the rope broke. Ackerman ended up sitting in a blackberry bush and Mrs. Graham was left sitting on the embankment by the creek.

Courthouse officials who received the following communication thought it must be either code or some foreign language. It was an invoice and read: Paions, 5 Weel, 3 Hambers, 3½ Putin, 7½ Bork. Completely dumbfounded at first they finally deciphered it to read: Balance, 5 (pounds of) veal, 3 hamburger, 3 pudding, and 7½ pork. Maybe the younger generation could use this as the basis for one of those languages of their own invention such as pig latin, double talk and the like. 'Blease bass the bork I just finished my putin."

Willie Washington, an Ashland colored youth, asked for a fine this morning in Mansfield municipal court and Acting Judge J. V. Will promptly accommodated him, only to find that Washington had no money. Brought into court by the state highway patrol for driving without a permit, Washington argued that he had a 1943 driver's license at home. When Acting Judge Will offered to continue the case until tomorrow to give the youth a chance to produce it, Washington said he was "pretty busy now, so let me have my fine and get it over with." The fine was $10 and costs, and Washington was taken back to the city jail until he can produce the money.

THREE SOLDIERS DIE OF THIRST

Fourth Missing From Platoon of 39 Which Got Lost In California Desert.

(By International News Service)

CAMP YOUNG, Cal.—(INS)—An army board of inquiry today investigated the death of three soldiers who died of thirst in the arid Chocolate mountain region south of El Centro, Cal., after they became lost during army maneuvers.

A fourth soldier still was missing.

The four men, whose names were temporarily withheld, were members of a platoon of 39. Becoming lost over the week-end in the hottest temperature ever recorded on the southeastern California desert, six fellow soldiers made their way to a railroad and flagged a train.

When they eventually returned with water, the three infantrymen were dead, the fourth lost and several others in critical condition. The rescued men all will recover, the army said.

The temperature at El Centro Sunday reached 124 degrees. It was believed to have exceeded 145 degrees in the desolate desert area where the soldiers died.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—As if to compensate this year's wartime stay-at-home vacationers who wouldn't think of going near a railroad ticket office, there's quite a spot of railroading coming to the screen. And some of it is pre-war style.

Foreword to Deanna Durbin's "His Butler's Sister" sets forth: "The foods, drinks, clothes, shoes, rubber, gas and other articles consumed or used in this picture are purely imaginary and have no relation to any actual foods, drinks, shoes, clothes, rubber, gas and other articles of today, rationed or otherwise. Any resemblance is purely accidental. This is a fable of the day before yesterday."

Coons

The "other articles" include, besides butler Pat O'Brien of the title and four or five other specimens of the vanished species known as domestic help, several thousand miles of first-class railroad travel. In a luxury train, too. Miss Durbin spent a week shuttling back and forth over nearly a mile of trackage, covering her trip from Centerville, Ind., to New York City. Her track system covers all available floor space inside the studio's big "Phantom of the Opera" stage and has spurs extending through the doorway. One incident of her trip could have happened only in other days—she meets a girdle salesman.

On nearby stage 22, Allan Jones and Evelyn Ankers were set for three or four weeks of choo-chooing while making "You're a Lucky Fellow, Mr. Smith." Most of the romance—even the marriage in the end—is set aboard the milk route special. Deanna's movie trip may remind you of days gone by: the Jones-Ankers excursion will give a peek into what today's travel will be like, if you're silly enough to try it. Jones plays Private Tony Smith, U. S. Army.

Both Deanna's streamliner tracks and the Jones-Ankers local line are used for "Honeymoon Lodge," in which David Bruce, Harriett Hilliard and June Vincent are involved. Here the scenarists took advantage of the current shortage of redcaps to make boy meet girl.

Boarding a train together, Bruce and Miss Hilliard meet when he takes the place of a missing redcap and helps with her bags. The complication develops when they are mistaken for honeymooners—while at their destination is waiting his real bride, Miss Vincent.

Indians Lose In 13 Innings

Dickey Hits Deciding Single Off Reynolds.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The Cleveland Indians gave their usual Yankee stadium performance yesterday in opening a four-game series with the Bronx Bombers.

The Yankees won 4 to 3, the fourth triumph in four games with the Indians in New York, and the third by a one-run margin.

The two teams do battle again today and then combine forces to oppose the Cloud-busters from the Naval Pre-Flight school of Chapel Hill, S. C., for the Red Cross benefit. Babe Ruth will manage the combined Yankee-Indian operation.

Yesterday's bitter loss was a 13-inning affray, in which the Tribe used two varsity hurlers. Al Smith started and gave up seven hits before being relieved in the sixth. Relief Pitcher Pete Center worked one full inning and then yielded the mound to Allie Reynolds.

Reynolds gave up only two hits in six and a third innings, but one of them was Bill Dickey's winning single.

CINCINNATI —(AP)— The Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Braves put on the whoop-de-do tonight for the benefit of the American Red Cross, and, with help of the Great Lakes Naval Training team, hope to register a financial home run.

Two games are scheduled for Crosley field. The first, a twilight affair, will be between a fan-picked nine comprised of stars of both the Reds and the Braves against Lieut. Comm. Mickey Cochrane's Sailors

The second is a regulation game between the Reds and Braves, but between the two contests, a field meet and patriotic exhibition is to be on tap.

The Reds opened the present series with Boston yesterday on a sour note, taking their lumps to the tune of 6 to 2.

Catcher Phil Masi was the big noise in the Boston lineup, booming out three hits and getting a walk in four trips to the plate. Bucky Walters worked seven and two-thirds inning for the Reds, fading out in eighth inning for his eleventh loss of the season against five victories.

Kids Defeat Westie Team

Bob Regula Wins Own Game With Home Run.

The kids defeated the Westinghouse softball team, leaders of the Industrial league, 7-5 last evening at Prospect park.

The kids? They are the young All-Stars managed by Flick Flockenzier, and composed mainly of high school and junior high ball tossers. They weren't a bit awed by the veteran Westies.

Bob Regula, who held the Westies to nine scattered blows, and scoreless for the last seven frames, won his own ball game in the sixth inning.

With the score tied at 5-5, Regula marched up to the dish with one mate aboard and socked out a home run for the deciding markers.

Would Revive Golf Tourneys

P. G. A. Moves To Book Major Links Classics.

By TOMMY DEVINE

CHICAGO —(U.P.)— A move to revive an extensive schedule of major golf tournaments was inaugurated today by two outstanding officials of the Professional Golfers' association.

Stepping into the picture with suggestions to return big-time competitive golf to the prominence it enjoyed prior to the war were Jimmy Hines, veteran star from Amsterdam, N. Y., chairman of the P. G. A. tournament committee, and Fred Corcoran, tournament manager of the organization.

Hines, a competitor in the $10,000 All-American open which ended Monday, said he would make a comprehensive report of the event to P. G. A. President Ed Dudley.

"I think the All-American open proved what can be done with a war year tournament," Hines said. "The field was a representative one and the attendance exceptionally good. It was a mistake for all the other major open tournaments, including our own P. G. A. sponsored event, to be cancelled."

Hines said tournament sponsors who cancelled their events because they feared the caliber of play would decline due to military induction of prominent players, could be guaranteed star-filled fields.

"It takes a minimum of 15 big name stars playing in all the tournaments to make a projected tour of success," Hines said. "We have that many available and ready. A program of 12 tournaments with a minimum of $60,000 in prize money would be required."

Corcoran, who left the P. G. A. to do recreation work in England for the Red Cross, has been asked by Dudley to resume his position with the golf group.

Corcoran currently is helping perfect plans for the Ryder cup-Hagen challenger matches at Detroit Aug. 7-8 and then will map a series of exhibition matches designed to take top stars into almost every big city in the nation during the next four months. The exhibitions will be for war relief.

It was hoped these will be a fore-runner to re-establishing the winter tour through the deep south and the far west.

"That's our goal now," Corcoran explained, "we're determined to keep golf going. I'll shortly begin contacting sponsors and civic organizations interested in taking part in the tournament revival."

The big-time tournament schedule formerly included 27 annual open events with prize purses of $3,000 or more. Only two survived the war cut.

HOW TO DO THE BREAST STROKE
by Glo
AP Features
IN doing the Breast-stroke, the swimmer should remember that it is a more relaxing stroke than the crawl, and can be maintained over a longer distance. Just be sure that the arms and legs don't conflict.
1. As the arms go out in the Breast stroke remember the secret of the stroke lies in using the arms and legs so that they don't conflict
2. Start by pulling both arms sideways through the water palms facing backward. Keep the legs absolutely straight out and together
3. When the arms get back of the shoulder line break the elbows and bring the hands in toward the abdomen to finish the stroke
4. As the hands near the body, begin the frog kick by bending the knees, then straightening them out so that the legs are far apart
5. Snap the rigid legs together to complete the kick, move the arms under the chin, out to full reach in front ready for a glide
THE BREAST-STROKE KICK is like that of a frog. As the legs are snapped together, the rest of the body, from hips to fingertips, must be in a straight line for a streamlined effect.

Keep First Place In Association Race.

(By Associated Press)

Milwaukee's Brewers, pace makers in the American Association and the league's leading exponents of the home run, also know how to get maximum results from the circuit smash.

They got but one homer last night to Indianapolis' two in the second game of a double header between the two leaders. However, the Milwaukee blow, by Third Baseman Grey Clarke, came with the bases loaded and ultimately brought a 4-3 victory.

It also brought an even break in the twin bill and enabled the Brewers to maintain their game and a half lead over the Indians. Indianapolis had cut the margin to a half game in the opener on Glen Fletcher's four-hit, 8-0 shutout.

Third place Columbus took advantage of the stalemate between the leaders and moved to within a game of second place by defeating St. Paul in a double header, 4-2 and 4-3.

Kansas City and Louisville divided a twin bill, the Blues winning the first, 4-0, and losing the second in the ninth, 4-3. Another ninth inning rally, at Minneapolis by Toledo, brought the Mudhens a 5-4 decision.

GETS DRAFT ORDER

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Johnny Vander Meer, Cincinnati Reds' double no-hit hurler in 1938, said he had been notified by his draft board to report for induction late next month. Vandy probably will hurl for the Reds until mid-September because of three-week furloughs for inductees. He is married and has one child born since Pearl Harbor.

Softballers Meet Ashland

Kid Teams Booked For Inter-City Series.

Athletic rivalry between Mansfield and Ashland will resume Aug. 16 and 19 when a picked team from the Mansfield Junior baseball league engages an Ashland nine at Liberty park and the Mansfield Maple Lake softballers journey to Ashland to meet one of that city's best young outfits.

In a letter to Al Fendrick, parks playground recreation director, Sydney Boyd, supervisor of the Ashland playground, proposed that Y. M. C. A. Physical Director Johnny Fike choose a team from the Junior baseball loop to face an Ashland team at Liberty park Aug. 16 at 6:15 p. m. Fike manages the league.

The softball tilt will be played under the lights at Brookside park, Ashland, Aug. 19, between Maple Lake, current first placers in the Parks association loop, and the Ashland team.

Boyd said the two Ashland teams will represent the Ashland playground program's baseball and softball circuits.

Fike announced that he has chosen 17 performers for the baseball tilt. They are Florro and Majors, catchers; Eckles, Reynolds and Bair, pitch; Bechtel and Bloor, first base; C. Sauder and Vogel, second base, Cline and Kuhn, shortstop; Swank and Gabautz, third base; R. Glasscock, Theesen, Black and J. Glasscock, outfielders

SPORTS ROUNDUP

NEW YORK—(AP)—Just wondering—Joe Dey, the U. S. Golf Association secretary, has heard from so many army camps that need golf equipment to keep their driving ranges, pitch-putt courses, etc., going that he's beginning to wonder just how many outfits have golf facilities . . . Also, whether the war will produce a new generation of long-driving golfers who learned to sock 'em on the camp driving ranges . . . and Nat Fleischer, the Ring magazine editor, wonders just how ablebodied sports stars in general are . . . Nat's records show 17 first-flight boxers of the past two years who have been discharged from the services for various injuries that weren't noted during boxing commission examinations.

HEADLINE HEADLINER

When the (AP) wires brought the Erie, Pa., Dispatch-Herald, word about how baseball fans learned the news of Mussolini's resignation, Wes Driscoll topped the story with this compact headline: "'Bum' Delays Yankee Game.'

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Tommy Fitzgerald, Louisville Courier-Journal: "An umpire worked the Dodgers-White Sox exhibition game at Cooperstown carrying a taxicab ad on his chest protector. He no doubt was depending on the company's regulations to keep more than five fans from riding him at the same time."

SERVICE DEPT.

Ray Robinson, the "uncrowned welterweight champ, "has qualified as U marksman at Mitchel Field, L. I. . . . And just to show what a "break" a bigshot boxer gets in the army, Ray had to put in a full day on the target range Sunday then put in an eight-hour tour of guard duty that night in order to get some time off Monday to attend the funeral of Murray Lewin, the boxing writer.

Mayer Shoots 4 Under Par

Just One Stroke Off Possum Run Record.

Joe Mayer, Mansfield's Mr. Golf, is treating himself to a hot streak these days, and seldom has he been warmer than he was last evening in pacing The News-Journal league with a four-under-par 32 on the outside nine at Possum Run.

He was just one stroke off the record of 31 for the outside held by his opponent of last evening, Carl Kushin. Mayer holds the inside nine record with 30.

Mayer wound up his par-shattering round with an eagle on the long 18, where his drive was far over the hill. His five-iron approach hit the corner of the green, and stuck, and he sank a 12-foot putt for the eagle.

Monday evening Joe had paced the Moose league at Coolridge with an even-par 34. One down to Ray Malaska at the end of seven holes, he took the last two with birdies, sinking a long putt on nine to win the match.

Mayer was the only sub-par shooter in the N-J league yesterday. One over at 37 were Carl Wiseman, Pete Linsters and Frank Lay, while Grant Hanawalt had 38.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT
(By the Associated Press)

BROOKLYN—Sal Bartolo, 128, Boston, knocked out Jose Roto, 132, Colombia (1).

Clubhouse Friction Blamed For Action

Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons Named New Boss of Phils By Cox.

By TED MEIER, Associated Press Sports Writer.

CLUBHOUSE FRICTION was reliably reported today to be the main reason why Bucky Harris was dismissed last night as manager of the National league Phillies in a move that astonished the baseball world.

Coming on the heels of the Phils' double defeat at the hands of the first place St. Louis Cardinals, who stretched their winning streak to 11 in a row, the news of Harris' ousting and the announcement of Freddy Fitzsimmons, Brooklyn pitcher-coach, as his successor, surprised most diamond followers.

It was a "shock" to Harris who said at St. Louis "apparently Mr. Cox (William D. Cox, new owner of the Phils) means to call me sometime and tell me of the change. At that time I expect to get the explanation I feel is in order."

Everything was lovely last February when Cox signed the former "boy wonder" as manager. Since the start of the season, however, the 33-year-old Cox, who pitched and caught in his undergraduate days at Yale and New York university, frequently has visited the players in the clubhouse after the game.

This was perfectly all right until, the grapevine reports, the youthful magnate declared, among other things, that he couldn't understand why the club wasn't fighting for the lead. Harris is reported to have suggested diplomatically that it would be better if Cox, as president of the club, sent for the players he wished to talk to instead of seeing them in the clubhouse. This apparently didn't set well with Cox.

"Fitz" is to make his managerial debut tonight when the Phils again play the Cards.

Today is the second war relief day of the season for the major leagues.

Back on June 30, a total of 134,578 fans paid $147,391 into the treasury of National War Relief, Inc. The clubs hope today's program, highlighted by Babe Ruth's return to the Yankee stadium as a one-day manager, will exceed that mark both in attendance and dollars.

The pitching of Murry Dickson and Howie Krist brought the Cardinals victories by 6 to 2 and 5 to 2 to boost their lead over the idle Dodgers to 9½ games.

The most exciting game was in New York where the Yankees and Cleveland Indians battled 13 innings before a single by Pinch Hitter Bill Dickey scored Bill Johnson from second base for a 4 to 3 Yankee triumph.

Pittsburgh, kept out of second place on Monday when Brooklyn's Arky Vaughan socked a grand slam homer, started a new drive for the runnerup spot by beating the New York Giants 8 to 5. Home runs by Maurice Van Robays, Tom O'Brien and Bob Elliott accounted for six of the Pirate runs.

The Boston Braves moved over the Phillies into sixth place by defeating Cincinnati, 6 to 2.

Trailing by three runs going into the eighth, the St. Louis Browns tied the score, then bunched four hits for fours in the ninth to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 8 to 4. The Chicago White Sox, helped by Gordon Maltzberger's relief pitching, defeated Washington, 6 to 5, in a night game.

The Dodgers, Cubs, Red Sox and Tigers were idle.

HARRIS SHOCKED

ST. LOUIS —(INS)— 'It is shocking."

This was the statement today of Bucky Harris in commenting on his dismissal as manager of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Moreover, Harris declared he has not been officially notified of his ouster.

"I haven't talked to Mr. Cox (William Cox, president of the Phils). I suppose he will call me and let me in on what's going on. So far, I haven't heard a word. I guess it's true, but I would like to have at least an explanation.

"Until I get official word on the matter, I'm sitting tight. As far as I know officially, I'm still manager of the club."

The Phillies are in St. Louis for a series with the Cardinals, and dropped a double-header to the world champions yesterday.

Introduce Football

Yanks Attempt To Sell Game To Australia.

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK —(INS)—Perhaps in time football as we play it will be appreciated and enjoyed in Australia through the missionary work of American troops, but right now the game is as strange to the Australians as cricket would be to bleacherites at Brooklyn Ebbets Field.

John Henry, former International News Service sports writer who currently is one of our young men covering the war in the South Pacific, sends in a clipping from a Sydney, Australia, sports page in which some of the finer points of what is called "gridiron football" are explained to prospective spectators.

The piece came out prior to the first game ever played in Sydney, a tussel between U. S. army and navy teams.

The article is headed "Gridiron: Football Commando Style," and some of the highlights follow:

It (American football) is played with practically no restraint. Records show that in the 1941 season 60 players were killed. Efforts are made to cut down the injury rate.

* * *

Players wear leather helmets, and shoulders and legs of their uniforms are heavily padded with a specially made fibre. Players in Sunday's game will wear American helmets and shoulder pads, but their padded pants were made by Sam Plotkin, army tent and sports goods maker, of Leichhardt.

Plotkin could not secure fibre similar to that used in America for padding. He padded the pants with ordinary sole leather.

Plotkin said: "The Yanks might like what I produced, but I wouldn't like to wear them. They seem pretty baggy to me.

"I've followed Rugby league and Rugby Union for years, but I can't see why men have to play football in pants like these."

Americans take their football very seriously.

Some universities admit students simply because they are good footballers. Tuition fees and spending money for these youths are often provided by the old boys of the universities, or by the universities themselves. (Ed. note—And we thought subsidizing had been wiped out.)

On Sunday each team will have a special cheering section of 500 men, led by a 'yell king" assisted by two yell leaders.

The Americans have had difficulty in obtaining a properly shaped and weighted football. Two Melbourne firms submitted 24 sample balls, but each was rejected. (Ed. Note—This is a reminder that the boys in the services at home and abroad can use more athletic equipment).

The referee, who blows a whistle, is assisted by an umpire and a field judge (timekeeper), who are on the field with him, and a headlinesman, all of whom blow horns.

There are no American gridiron horns in Sydney. For several weeks U. S. special service officers have toured music shops looking for three reasonably small instruments, which hoot or give a low-toned note when blown.

Aside from all the foregoing, John Henry says in a note that the army won the game from the navy, on two passes by Major Jorman Duncan to Sgt. Vernon Bell and Pvt. Raymond Kelasky. The score was 14 to nil, as the Australian press reported it.

SEES POST-WAR BOOM FOR OHIO BY CHEMISTRY

Development Commissioner Points To State's Resources and Location.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—Ohio is "sitting in the lap of the gods" in relation to the great industrial expansion that is coming to America after the war, H. H. Hampton, chairman of the Ohio Development and Publicity commission, declared today.

"The day of the metal age is over, he said. "We are approaching what is to be known as the chemical age."

There are six essential natural resources that a chemical company needs for operation. They are air, water, coal, petroleum, limestone and sulphur. Of these, Ohio lacks only the sulphur, Hampton commented.

Fifty-six year old Hampton whose home is in Cleveland, has taken over the development commission to make a survey of the Buckeye state for industrial and agricultural purposes, designed to inform prospective post-war planners on the various locations, quantity and quality of Ohio's resources.

Although he could not reveal the number of Ohio war plants in comparison with that of other states, Hampton disclosed that Ohio "is at the top."

"There is a tremendous amount of federal money invested here," he asserted. 'This, in itself, answers the question of what our transition into post-war industrialism could be."

Hampton expressed the opinion that if Ohio is smart enough to take advantage of its opportunities, this state will become developed to a point undreamed of heretofore.

One of Ohio's greatest boons is its geographical center of distribution and consumption, he pointed out. The responsibility for the future development of the Buckeye state as well as that of the nation lies with private industry, Hampton remarked.

Private industry must conceive uses for conversion of war plants and it has awakened to this fact. Already in the field of household appliances, such as refrigerators, and electric lighting, designers and scientists have plans which will revolutionize the entire industry, Hampton said.

Having travelled extensively through the country as a $1-a-year man in charge of organizing the transportation unit of the ammunition division of the Army Ordnance department, Hampton said it was amazing the tremendous interest displayed by large corporation representatives in Ohio.

Most of Hampton's life has been devoted to developing projects, but he holds firmly to a rule that he will never attempt to develop an industry where it does not properly belong.

"In the end," he said, "such an industry would be a failure, and would prove a loss to itself as well as causing unemployment to the community and state where it is located."

MAKES KNIVES FOR COMBAT

Florida Man Wins Fame For Production of Blades For Fighting Men.

(By International News Service)

CINCINNATI—The old saying that you "build a better mousetrap than your neighbor the world will beat a path to your door" applies also to knives.

At least that is what Walter D. Randall, Jr., a former Cincinnatian, has found. Because of a knife he designed for an army colonel en route to Africa several months ago, Randall has been deluged with requests from Uncle Sam's fighting men for an "all-purpose fighting knife."

Five years ago Randall took time out from managing his family's orange groves in Florida, to make a hunting knife from a discarded auto spring. A friend admired it and promptly received it as a gift. This was repeated several times and it was two years before Randall was able to keep a knife for his own use.

Friends on hunting trips reported the knives excellent and when the war came, an army colonel who had seen one of Randall's knives on the Mojave Desert, asked him to make a knife for hand-to-hand fighting.

The knife designed by the youth had a small hilt, double-edged razor sharp blade, and is so balanced that it can be thrown in a straight line. It has a chamois throng by which the knife can be attached to the wrist.

Only one thing worries Randall. He is strictly a one-man factory working 18 hours a day and in addition has difficulty obtaining materials.

Hobby Started 30 Years Ago Now 1-Man War Plant

ST. LOUIS—(U.P.)—Thirty years ago James A. Beard, jr., started a hobby and now it has grown into a full-fledged, one-man war industry occupying the 15-by-25-foot basement of his St. Louis home.

The smallness of his war plant is right in keeping with Beard's hobby. He likes to manufacture tiny things. And for more than a year Beard has been working an average of 90 hours per week to produce more than 45,000 minute precision parts used in war machines or their manufacture.

Before the war Beard manufactured tiny gasoline airplane motors for use in model craft. The little engines weighed from 1.6 to 5.5 ounces and their manufacture gave him considerable experience in the making of small parts. The result is the Ulthsa Precision Products Co., which turns out pinion blanks for airplane direction-finders.

These blanks are only five-eighths of an inch long and Beard is proud of the fact that the last 25,000 have been accepted without a rejection.

Skeleton Leads To Discovery of 24-Year-Old Murder

TRACE CRIME OF PASSION BACK TO 1916

Police Charge 60-Year-Old Farmer With Slaying Man, Hiding Body.

(By United Press)

MONTREAL — A 27-year-old crime of passion was unfolding here today.

The discovery a week ago of a skeleton, buried in the cellar of a farmhouse led to the arrest yesterday of a 60-year-old farmer, who was charged with murder in the seemingly forgotten crime.

Only a few details of the murder came out at the inquest yesterday, but they were enough to make a pattern for what appeared to be almost a "perfect crime."

The man charged was Luigi Stabile, who in 1916 occupied the farmhouse where the still partially clothed bones of his brother-in-law were found. The witnesses were Mrs. Armella Costello and Joseph Festa, Rochester, N. Y. They identified the body as their father, Carmino Festa, who disappeared mysteriously in October, 1916.

The crime might never have come to light had not the present owner of the house found the body when he was digging a shallow ditch to drain his cellar. Police traced the tenancy of the house back through the year, checking with its tenants for an explanation. It was then that they discovered that Carmino Festa had vanished over night in 1916.

Mrs. Costello's story of the day of his disappearance began with hints of a motive of jealousy. She recalled that sometime during the day she saw her father and Mrs. Stabile together in a room in the farmhouse.

She also recalled an incident in the barn, when she and her brother Joseph were getting the milk. Stabile, she said, took her father from the barn into the house with him and she never saw her father again.

Mrs. Costello said her father was wearing yellow topboots. Remains of such boots were found with the skeleton.

Three days later, Stabile moved the Festa family to Montreal and told Mrs. Festa not to think about her husband anymore, and that "if she wanted to marry again it would be all right."

Detroit Colored League Members Hit Police.

DETROIT —(AP)— The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced today it had presented to Mayor Edward Jeffries a detailed statement of charges of acts by the police department and others in the recent race riots.

Through its special counsel, Thurgood Marshall, the association asserted that affidavits it has taken "are more than sufficient to justify calling of a special grand jury."

RETAILERS TO MEET MONDAY

Food, Meat Dealers To Hear Regulations on Items Under OPA Control.

Food and meat retailers in Richland county will meet next Monday to put into effect the new Office of Price Administration regulations for dry and perishable food items, C. C. Beelman, ration board chairman, announced today.

The meeting will be held in the ballroom of the Mansfield-Leland hotel at 8 p. m. E. J. Champion, of the foods department of the OPA in Cleveland, will be present.

The new food provisions will supply fixed markups which retailers of food will apply starting Aug. 5 to net costs to establish ceiling prices. A. H. Anderson, OPA district price officer, has emphasized that when a food product has been flat-priced under the community price plan, this price will remain unchanged by the new regulations.

Chief advantage for retailers beset by manpower problems will be the consolidation of numerous markup regulations into one for the sake of convenience and clarity. Only major food items not covered by the regulation are meat, candy, bread, milk, ice cream, fish, tobacco, beer, and liquor, all of which are controlled by other price measures, Anderson said.

TAFT TO FIGHT TREASURY RULE ON PENSIONS

Declares Officials Defying Senate, Would Permit Tax Deductions.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O., announced today that when congress reconvenes he will introduce a joint resolution to declare invalid recent treasury regulations which he said "nullify" tax exemptions for employes' pension trusts of many large companies.

Taft also proposed to prevent the internal revenue commissioner from considering whether private pension funds provide better benefits to some employes than the social security act.

Taft said the treasury regulations were issued "in direct defiance" of an opinion given to treasury experts by the senate finance committee that corporations could deduct, for income tax purposes, their contribution to private pension funds. The committee felt, Taft said, that the deduction should be allowed even where employes earning less than $3,000 a year do not benefit by private pension funds.

The treasury held that a corporation's pension fund designed to apply specifically to employes receiving more than $3,000 was "discriminatory" and therefore contributors made to the fund by the corporation could not be deducted in computing its income taxes. Treasury General Counsel Randolph Paul asked the finance committee's support of this view on June 18. The committee told him that the revenue act of 1942 specifically provided that such trust funds were not "discriminatory."

"Nevertheless," Taft said, "congress had no sooner adjourned than regulations were issued in direct defiance of the committee's opinion and the clear meaning of the act."

Taft said the 1942 revenue act "made extensive and detailed provisions regarding pension trusts to remove abuses which existed." But, he said, the act provided "expressly that a trust should not be invalid merely because it excluded employes receiving $3,000 and less, if it included substantially all employes receiving more than that amount."

"Some treasury officials decided, however, that they would hold such a trust to be invalid if it treated the employes in the trust better than the social security acts treats the employes receiving less than $3,000 a year," he said

With Congressman J. Harry McGregor scheduled to be in Mansfield Friday and Saturday to discuss current problems with Richland countians, the Mansfield League of Women Voters today announced that a public question-and-answer session with the congressman will be held Friday at 8 p. m. in the common pleas courtroom at the courthouse.

The league's plan for an open forum is in line with a proposal made several days ago by the News-Journal after Congressman McGregor announced he would be in the city next week-end.

Mrs. D. O. Meese, president of the League of Women Voters, said the meeting Friday night will be non-partisan, and the public is invited to submit questions for Congressman McGregor to answer.

She urged that the questions be written and turned over to her before the meeting or to Congressman McGregor during the session. Queries should deal with current national problems and topics of interest to persons in the 17th congressional district which the congressman represents in Washington.

Back home from Washington during a brief congressional recess, McGregor will be at the Richland county courthouse to meet his constituents Friday and Saturday after 9 a. m. He will conduct similar forum sessions today and Thursday in Ashland.

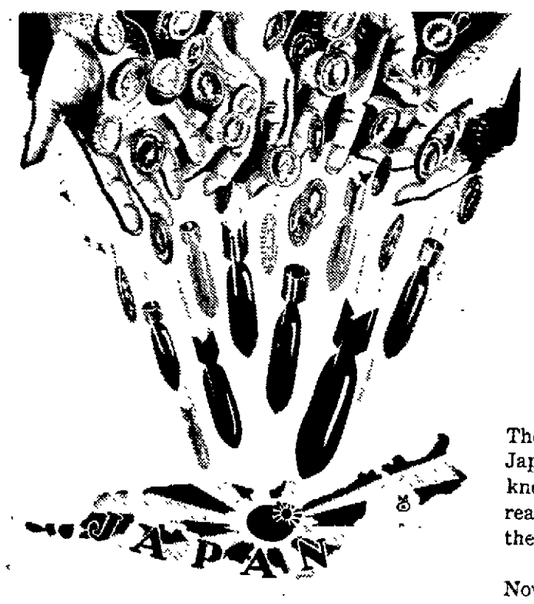
BOMB TOKIO WITH SMALL CHANGE



Nickles -- Dimes -- Quarters - - - add them up to one dollar's worth of War Stamps and you've bought your share toward building the Shangri-La.

There was a day when American airplanes charged at Japan in a bombing that will never be forgotten. No one knew how or when the planes that carried those bombs reached their taking-off place. Our president referred to their base as a mid-oceon "Shangri-La."

Now we are getting ready for more and greater bombings of Japan. And this time the Shangri-La will be an actuality: a real airplane carrier by that name which will carry destruction to the enemy.

It's in your power to build the Shangri-La . . . with your small change. A dollar in War Stamps from you this month is your share . . . but the more the better! Every man . . . every woman . . . every child in the United States must consider this a personal responsibility: one so easily carried out!

STOCK MARKET PRICES MOVE IRREGULARLY

Power Distribution Reaches New Record During Past Week, Report Shows.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stock market price movements were irregular in today's early proceedings with a few leaders displaying modest recovery tendencies.

Fractionally improved at an active opening were U. S. Steel, North American Co., U. S. Rubber and Loew's. Union Carbide was off 1⅛ on the initial transaction.

Watchers of industrial trends noted the report of Edison Electric Institute showing energy distribution reached another new record in the week ended July 24 at 4,196,357,000 kilowatt hours. This compared with 4,184,143,000 in the previous week and 3,625,645,000 in the like period of 1942.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Purchasing by previous short sellers advanced rye fractionally at the opening today and other grains were steady in sympathy with the action in Rye.

Wheat started ⅛ lower to ¼ higher, September $1.43½-c, December $1.45⅛, and rye was ⅛-½ higher, September $1.02-1.01¾.

THEATERS

"Pilot Number Five."

The fall of Java forms the background for the story of "Pilot Number Five," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of America at war, now showing at the Ohio. Franchot Tone, Marsha Hunt and Gene Kelly are starred in the film. The story opens on a bomb-blasted Java airport, where a squadron of United Nations flyers are awaiting the reported arrival of Jap bombers. George Collins (Tone) takes off in their lone makeshift plane a intercept a Jap aircraft carrier. The screenplay was written by David Hertz.

Pride of the Yanks.

Gary Cooper portrays Lou Gehrig, late New York Yankee first baseman, in "Pride of the Yankees," the story of the baseball hero, which opens today at the Madison. The picture showed at the Ohio several months ago at advanced prices. "The Pride of the Yankees," follows the career of baseball's "Iron Man" from the time he came up to the major leagues until he was stricken with a rare disease that claimed his life in 1940. Teresa Wright plays the part of Mrs. Gehrig. Seen in the cast are Babe Ruth and Bill Dickey, two of Gehrig's teammates. Other film is "Salute For Three."

Tennessee Johnson.

The period following the close of the Civil war forms the plot for "Tennessee Johnson," current top attraction at the Ritz. The stars are Van Heflin, Lionel Barrymore and Ruth Hussey. The story is based on the life of Andrew Johnson, illiterate runaway tailor's apprentice who becomes president of the United States following Lincoln's death. The picture deals with one of the most turbulent political periods in our history. Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck are starred in the companion feature, "Meet John Doe."

Parachuted to Earth, Jap Plane Cut Foot Off

Here is the first picture taken of Lieut. Sam S. Logan, left, 22-year-old fighter pilot from Paola, Kan., who survived a barbaric Japanese ordeal in which he had his foot cut off by the propeller of a Jap Zero plane as he parachuted helplessly to earth over the Russell islands in June. Logan, shown in a hospital at Pearl Harbor, was shot at by the Jap Zero pilot and failing to kill him as he 'chuted to earth, the fiendish Jap aimed his plane right at Logan, the propeller cutting off his foot. Logan landed in the water and by superhuman effort managed to survive until he was rescued. At the right is Lieut. J. G. Percy of San Francisco who survived a 2,000-foot free fall from his shot-up plane in the same area when his 'chute failed to open.

TUPELO HONEY YIELD SLUMPS

State Official Says 1943 Production Off 50 Per Cent.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Fancier's of Florida famed Tupelo Honey can only half satisfy their sugar tooth this year according to the State Bee Inspector C. Mack who pointed out tupelo production will approximate 250,000 pounds as compared with a normal 500,000 pounds.

"Reason for the decrease," he explained, "is traceable to lack of rainfall when tupelo gum trees were setting their buds last year. This resulted in a substantial drop in supply of nectar from tupelo blossoms."

Mack said West Florida's yield of tupelo amounts to from six to 75 pounds per colony as contrasted with a normal 150 pounds.

Tupelo honey, aside from its mild and attractive flavor, is important for its medical properties. Many physicians prescribe it for diabetics because of its high levulose content which is more readily tolerated by persons whose digestive systems are not able properly to assimilate plain sugar.

By analysis, tupelo contains about twice as much levulose as dextrose while the average honey has nearly equal amounts of each. This makes it a product that will not granulate. Samples have been kept for more than 25 years without granulation.

Interesting feature of production of Tupelo honey is the conditioning process through which bees are put in preparation for the short white tupelo season which lasts from three to four weeks, reaching a climax about April 20.

During this time, bees work so frantically their average life is only 21 days. They wear out their wings in that time and die.

Because the tupelo gum tree is an early pollen producer, many apiarists move their hives to points in South Georgia where plenty of natural pollen is available. Then for several months the bees are subjected to a conditioning program for the brief tupelo flow period.

The bees are brought back from winter quarters early in January and begin to feed on early blooming Florida plants. They gradually built up their strength during January and February for the tupelo season.

After the season starts they fill their hives so quickly with honeycomb it becomes necessary to rob them twice between the middle of April and the middle of May.

Records show single colonies of bees have been known to gather 20 pounds of honey in one day. In a favorable season one apiary containing 90 colonies produced 38 barrels of honey in three weeks, each barrel containing 30 gallons.

Though tupelo gum trees are native to the swamps and river bottoms of northwest Florida where they grow profusely, they also grow in Louisiana, Mississippi and other southern states However, Department of Agriculture officials claim only in Florida has production of pure tupelo honey been reduced to an exact science and an association formed to protect its purety.

NEW TROUBLES BREAK OUT IN MILAN, ITALY

Yanks Advance on Messina After Fall of Cefalu; Rumors Fly Wildly.

port" at Messina had captured the town of Cefalu on the northern coast.

A communique said the Americans now were advancing against strongly-prepared German defenses at San Stefano.

Cefalu is only 90 miles from Messina and is 38 miles east of fallen Palermo, Sicily's capital.

Field dispatches said Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s, U. S. forces were slashing forward on a deep front along the north coast and had also captured Alimena, 25 miles southeast of Cefalu, and four other towns.

With only a thin sprinkling of Italians, German troops were reported in complete charge of the strong Mt. Erna line running from San Stefano to Catania.

The daily war bulletin also reported Canadian troops driving northeast from central Sicily had advanced in hard fighting against bitter opposition.

Dispatches from Allied headquarters said the battle for the Axis' dwindling bridgehead had reached the "slugging stage" as U. S. and Canadian troops raced to outflank German defenders of Catania on the east coast. But the British Eighth army was still stopped dead before Catania for the 13th successive day—longer than it was halted either at El Alamein in Egypt or at the Mareth line in Tunisia.

The status of Italy under Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio's new regime was clouded by a host of conflicting reports:

1. In London, Prime Minister Churchill replied with a crisp "No, sir," when asked in the house of commons whether any reply had been received to requests for the unconditional surrender of Italy.

2. Dispatches from Istanbul told of a hasty and mysterious conference at sea between the Italian and Turkish foreign ministers, suggesting that Turkey might serve as a go-between in peace or armistice negotiations.

3. Madrid heard Italy would continue the war on the side of the Axis only if Germany gave adequate aid for the defense of southern Italy against the threat of Allied invasion.

4. Swiss dispatches said the Germans were preparing a strong defense line along the Po river in northern Italy.

5. Turkish reports said German troops were massing at several points along the Hungarian frontier, in the wake of Nazi pressure attempting to prevent Hungary from withdrawing from active participation in the war.

6. A Budapest broadcast declared that at Athens, the capital of Greece, had been placed under 8 p. m. curfew as a result of "events of the past few days."

7. Reports from the Balkans said Italian troops were being partially evacuated from Greece and Albania.

8. The Algiers radio said Nazi troops in considerable numbers were heading northward through Italy, indicating Germany was doubtful of the new Italian government's intentions.

The obvious implication was that the Germans were either seeking to escape before Italy should surrender or were abandoning southern Italy as indefensible against an Allied invasion.

9. Swiss telegraph agency reports from the Italian frontier declared without confirmation that Marshal Badoglio's regime was "discussing conditions of an armistice" in Vatican City. NBC quoted the Rome radio, however, as saying reports of Italian peace overtures were "unfounded."

10. Travelers reaching the Swiss border from Italy reported serious clashes between die-hard Fascists and regular Italian army troops, chiefly in Milan, the birthplace of fascism.

Turin, Bologna, Genoa and other northern Italian cities reported disorders as the populace cheered the downfall of Mussolini, demanded the ouster of Nazi troops in Italy, and clamored for peace. Many Fascists were placed under arrest.

Germans Shaken By Mussolini Fall

STOCKHOLM—(U.P.)—The fall of Mussolini shook the German people more than any other event of the war, reports direct from Berlin said today, and statements cleared by Nazi censorship indicated Germany already is resigned to eventual loss of her southern ally.

News dispatches to this neutral capital said Berliners, made apathetic by years of unreliable information in their press, besieged stands for newspapers announcing the change in the Italian government.

The correspondent of the Social-Demokraten said German friends ran to him "with indescribable expressions" crying out in wonderment, "What do you believe?" The reaction, the Aftontidningen Berlin correspondent said, was like that of a man who declared "with moving seriousness, 'So, it has gone that far'."

"It is not concealed that developments in Italy can directly affect the entire German position," the Berlin representative of the Svenska Dagbladet wrote.

The fact that Nazi censorship allowed these and similar statements to pass led to the belief in neutral circles that the Germans were preparing their people for Italy's loss through a separate peace with the Allies.

All reports stressed that the fall of the Fascist dictator, whom Germans had been taught to believe represented Italy as much as Adolf Hitler represents Germany, was a complete surprise even to Hitler himself. Der Fuehrer had no idea of the possibility at his recent meeting with Mussolini, the Aftontidningen said.

Duce Fall Keeps Nazis, Nips Talking

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Tokyo radio reported Heinrich Georg Stahmer, German ambassador to Japan, conferred today with Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu for the second time "since the recent political change in Italy."

Government monitors recorded the broadcast in which the Japanese were told at the same time that "close relations are being maintaind among Japan, Germany and Italy."

Nazi Chancellory Buzzes at Event

LONDON—(INS)—The chancellory of the German government in Berlin has been a center of great activity since Monday as a result of the fall of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, the Algiers radio said today.

The broadcast, recorded by Reuters, said that Adolf Hitler had returned to the reich capital by air from the Russian front because of the turn of events. The Nazi chancellor, it was added, was believed in Germany to know just as little about the Mussolini resignation as the rest of the world.

Says Italy Won't Get Back Empire

LONDON—(INS)—Italy has lost her empire and colonial restoration has no place in the present plans of the United Nations, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons today as rumors of peace overtures by Marshal Pietro Badoglio were squelched by authoritative spokesmen.

The third day following former Premier Benito Mussolini's dramatic disappearance from the rulership of Italy again found London a veritable bee-hive of rumor and speculation.

But these salient facts developed:

1—Great Britain does not intend by any means to restore to any reconstituted government of Italy the African possessions lost by her in battle.

2—No peace overtures have yet been made by the Badoglio government and the war goes on and will continue until Italy capitulates or has been beaten to her knees.

3—Mussolini remains the war's No. 1 mystery man, with no clue as to his whereabouts, his future or his fate emerging from a welter of unverified rumors.

Sixth Raid Adds To Ruin In Hamburg

BULLETIN

LONDON—(INS)—Allied fighters and bombers filled the sky over the English channel throughout the daylight hours today as they headed out for Northern France. At times observers on the coast could hear the crash of high explosives.

LONDON—(AP)—RAF bombers returned to Hamburg in great force last night, the British announced today, to heap further destruction on the great German port which has been the object of continuing round-the-clock attacks since Saturday night.

It was the RAF's fourth successive night assault upon the battered city, which in normal times has a population of more than 1,000,000. Sandwiched in between these night raids were two smashing daylight attacks by American bombers on Sunday and Monday.

Targets in the Ruhr valley, site of many important German war industries, also were bombed during the night, said an air ministry communique, which acknowledged loss of 18 bombers.

Mosquitoes of the fighter command carried out offensive patrols over Germany, Holland and France, attacking airfields and railway communications, the bulletin said.

The attack on Hamburg was described by the air ministry as "concentrated and effective."

Nazis Withdrawing From Below Orel

(By United Press)

MOSCOW (U.P.)—The Germans have begun large-scale withdrawals below Orel, the army organ Red Star said today as the battle for that south-central front bastion neared a climax.

With the Red army athwart a section of the vital Orel-Bryansk railroad and with the highway running southwest from Orel under Soviet fire, the Germans were reported fighting a desperate rear-guard delaying action to cover the retreat of large forces south of the city to avoid encirclement.

Front reports of the German withdrawal followed an announcement in the Russian communique that the enemy was being forced to abandon position after position under increasing Soviet blows.

In two days of fighting, one unit south of Orel was credited with killing 1,000 Germans and smashing 26 enemy tanks.

The Russians generally gained two and a half to four miles and captured more than 50 villages yesterday in tightening their iron arc around the Orel bulge, where some 250,000 enemy officers and men ar ethreatened with a "summer Stalingrad."

Tommy Shares His Ration---Supermen Give Up

It's share alike for the British Tommy, center, top photo, as he divides his biscuit ration with the children who gathered around him in Palazzolo, Sicily, after the Allies captured the town. miles round trip from Midway to Wake since May 15.

The navy communique said that despite fighter resistance and anti-aircraft fire "bombs were placed on designated targets" without any American planes being lost or casualties to personnel in the Tuesday attack.

The North Pacific actions against Kiska totaled 13 Monday and six Tuesday. Both days of action apparently were highly successful. The navy reported that in the Monday operations numerous fires and explosions were observed. One American plane, a Warhawk fighter, was lost. But its pilot was rescued by a navy Catalina patrol bomber. Spotty weather prevented full observations of the attack yesterday but it was officially reported that hits were made in the Japanese bivouac area.

Tokyo Claims U. S. Cruiser Sunk

LONDON—(INS)—The Japanese claimed today in an imperial headquarters communique broadcast from Tokyo and recorded by Reuters that a United States cruiser of the San Francisco class was torpedoed and sunk off San Cristobal in the Solomon islands on July 20.

The enemy report was not substantiated in Allied quarters.

Reports Allies Raid Hong Kong

LONDON—(UP)—Allied planes raided Hong Kong yesterday for the first time since Nov. 28, the DNB (German) news agency said today in a Berlin broadcast.

The broadcast said six bombers escorted by fighters were turned back by the occupied city's defenses and that their bombs fell harmlessly into the sea.

Yanks 2100 Yards From Munda Goal

(INS Staff Correspondent)

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—(INS)—With the isolated Japanese garrison at Munda grimly contesting every foot of ground, American jungle troops today drove to within 2,100 yards of the besieged enemy air base on New Georgia island in the central Solomons following capture of Tetere, nearby coastal village.

A communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters disclosing the new gains before Munda also announced the heaviest air raid to date on the battered Jap base at Salamaua, in northeast New Guinea, menaced by American and Australian ground forces.

The bitter ground fighting in New Georgia, where Allied advances through thick jungle growth amid innumerable hidden enemy defenses for several weeks have been counted in yards, was accompanied by continued aerial bombardment of the Munda bastion. Torpedo planes and dive-bombers, accompanied by fighters, showered 35 tons of explosives on enemy positions at Biblo Hill, Gurasi and Munda Point.

four men in Cincinnati and drove them to Louisville and then back to Mansfield. His counsel testified at the hearing that he had used ration coupons other than those issued to him and his wife, adding that the extra coupons were received in envelopes, but he didn't know who sent them.

An OPA representative explained Slattery received the extra loose coupons after mentioning to friends that he would appreciate any coupons they cared to give him.

None of the four other Mansfielders was at the hearing, but their attorneys said they went to Galion and then to Cincinnati by train where they were invited by Slattery to ride to Louisville with him. They said he told them he had been saving his gasoline coupons to make the trip.

Commissioner Dunlavy said there was no evidence to show that any of the guests in the Slattery car had conspired with him in the use of illegally-obtained ration coupons.

Dunlavy said of Spreng: "I don't believe he would have intentionally or indirectly have been a party to the violation if he had known it was taking place."

Dunlavy went on to criticize Slattery for "inveigling his companions into making the trip through "misrepresentation and fraud."

In another statement at the hearing, it was said that Spreng had asked Slattery where he had obtained the extra gas coupons and that Slattery replied he "had saved them up for the trip."

The 45-day suspension against Mr. and Mrs. Slattery is effective Aug. 1, the OPA said.

tral diplomat told the United Press that the former duce and other prominent Fascists had been arrested and taken under strong military guard to Villa Conti, in Rome, where they were being held incommunicado.

London sources were inclined to believe that Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the new Italian chief of government, has placed his predecessor in protective custody, probably to use him as a pawn in talking peace terms with the Allies, who want to try Mussolini as a "war criminal."

Every report reaching London indicated that the Italians were striving to wipe out the last vestiges of the fascism that had enslaved them for more than 20 years, but it was recognized that the Italian propaganda machine might be spreading these stories in an attempt to make a favorable impression on the Allies in advance of any peace negotiations.

A Swiss broadcast quoted travellers from Italy as reporting pitched battles between Fascist blackshirts and regular army troops in the northern industrial center of Milan. The Fascists were said to have barricaded themselves in several party buildings and refused demands for their surrender, but finally were driven out of all but one, on Via Plinio, following gun battles.

The Milan newspaper, Corriere della Sera, which has been taken over by the Badoglio government, said four Fascists had been killed and 25 wounded in unspecified incidents in Milan, a Bern dispatch reported.

The Italian underground station Italia Avanti—Italy Forward!—charged that the Germans have occupied the Albanian ports of Durazzo and Valona, after violent clashes with Italian troops, in a move to forestall Italian evacuation of the Balkans.

Badoglio was described by the station as a hater of fascism and Germany and a 100 per cent supporter of the United Nations.

Neutral sources in Madrid said that Pope Pius XII was straining to arrange peace between Italy and the Allies with Harold Tittman, American charge d'affaires at the Vatican, taking an active part in negotiations.

The main obstacle to a quick agreement, Madrid said, was Badoglio's hesitation to make peace until he is sure that Germany will be too weak to turn her army and air force against Italy.

Other indications that Italy soon will seek a separate peace with the Allies included:

1—An Ankara dispatch said that Raffaele Guariglia, new Italian foreign minister, ever since he became ambassador to Turkey last February openly has asserted that Italy already has been defeated and should seek the best and cheapest exit possible.

2—Swiss dispatches pointed out that Hitler has not congratulated Badoglio though 36 hours have elapsed since the Italian marshal became head of the Axis partner.

3—Reports reached Stockholm that pamphlets were being distributed in Milan demanding an "honorable peace," the removal of German troops from Italy and the arrest and trial of Fascists.

cers our support in this movement."

Mayor Locke said he personally had investigated reports of juvenile delinquency in the city and had found "a great number of young people on the streets late at night who seemed to be spending considerable money, but conducting themselves properly."

He added that "about the only thing I can see that the city can do is enact a curfew law." There is no curfew ordinance on the city statute.

The mayor said today he was not fully convinced that a curfew is the solution to the juvenile delinquency problem and had asked the Mansfield Junior Association of Commerce for its idea on enactment of a city ordinance requiring young people to be off the streets late at night.

The J.A.C. is studying a plan to establish a recreation center, or "dry" night club, to give the city's youth somewhere to go at night.

In his letter to council, the mayor said he believed that "the solution should properly be a matter for action by character building agencies which already have it under consideration."

ing Secretary of State Hull already had covered the matter in saying he had seen no intimations and expected none from the White House or war department that the policy would be altered.

Mr. Roosevelt told his conference that neither the White House nor the state department authorized a broadcast by the Office of War Information (OWI) which referred to Vittorio Emanuele of Italy as "the moronic little king," and his disapproval was palpable.

In New York, Samuel Grafton, columnist for the New York Post, whom the OWI quoted in its broadcast, issued the following statement after hearing of President Roosevelt's disapproval:

"The phrase "moronic little king" seems to me a rather temperate reference to the head of a state which has declared war on my country, but in view of the ominous indication that England and America may accept the Badoglio government, I can only say that perhaps the moronic little king is smarter than I thought."

There was some thought that the chief executive might have been providing a bit of a preview to a section of his address when he stressed to reporters the breadth of the war effort.

He said an attack on Sicily, for example, really began on farms and in the mines of America and went through succeeding steps, where foods and raw materials were processed and transported in this country and across the ocean.

GRANGE HITS ROLLBACK OF FOOD PRICES

Attacks Labor's Demands as Inflationary, Wants Lower Living Standard.

to keep up that standard, workers should accept a lower standard of living.

It suggested that supply and demand be brought into balance by "increasing production to the maximum . . . regulating demand to the supply . . . and federal subsidies to a limited group in real distress."

Bowles' promise to resist pressure groups followed complaints to President Roosevelt by New York's Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia that OPA's subsidy program was not benefiting the consumer and that "inflexible" price regulations are not meeting local conditions.

The new OPA general manager minced no words in accepting the challenge of 'selfish" interests.

". . . Every industrial profiteer, every farm product speculator, every one who wants a bigger share than his neighbor would like to see the OPA wiped out tomorrow," he said "Many of these groups would scheme and struggle even in wartime, and woud not hesitate to distort truth, pull every political string and use any publicity device to gain their ends.

"When such pressures are applied unfairly to the OPA the American people have a right to know the true facts, and we shall tell them these facts in language that is clearly understandable."

Frozen Food Point Costs Going Up

WASHINGTON —(U P)— Grocery shoppers, beginning Aug 1, will have to give up three ration points more per pound for seven frozen foods—fruits, berries, green beans, lima beans, cut corn, peas and spinach—and one point more per pound for tomato juice

The new point values, announced today by the Office of Price Administration, will apply to blue stamps R, S and T which become valid Aug. 1. There were no point value changes in such regular canned foods as corn, beans and peas.

The validity period of blue stamps R, S and T will be from Aug 1 through Sept 20 Originally a series of three stamps was valid only for a month, but more recently the OPA has been allowing a one-week overlap period This overlap now is extended to three weeks

CLIMBS THROUGH FLAMES, SAVES PLANE FROM MID-AIR EXPLOSION

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—The lives of 11 men in the 'hard luck ship' the Flying Fortress 'Loose Goose' hung in the balance for 90 breathless seconds as flames from an exploded Jap shell danced around the bomb rack in which a live fused bomb still hung

Breathing a prayer 26-year-old Lieut William Crawford jr pilot and commander, pulled his salvo handle, to release the bomb and a burning auxiliary gas tank The handle broke off in his hands! The engineer pulled his salvo handle—and the same thing happened

"Our communications system within the ship was shot to pieces, and I had no way of telling the bombardier, below, of the danger we were in," Lieut. Crawford said today "I don't mind telling you I was scared. I was scared all during my 52 weeks in the South Pacific—but this was the worst of all.

"Finally, the co-pilot, Lieut John Gibbs, climbed through the flames burning his hands badly, and notified the bombardier who got rid of the bomb and the tank Actually it took only a minute and a half but sitting there, expecting that bomb to detonate from the heat any second—well, it seemed like hours

The modest young air hero brought his bullet ridden and flaming ship safely in to an aerial base in New Guinea 300 miles away without the loss of a life though he suffered shrapnel wounds in the legs

'When we landed" he said 'some of the men got down and kissed the ground"

This deed of heroism, for which he was awarded the Purple Heart, was only one of the many dramatic episodes in the South Pacific fighting career of the former Youngstown (O) college student, which he told to reporters today

Before the "Loose Goose" was set on fire Lieut Crawford and his crew had destroyed Jap fighters and one bomber on the ground at the Gasmata airdrome in the island of New Britain That was on May 17, 1943

PATTON FULL OF PRAISE FOR U. S. SOLDIERS

Says He Can't Give Enough Credit To Men For Victory at Palermo.

By RICHARD TREGASKIS
(INS Staff Correspondent)

UNITED STATES SEVENTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN SICILY, July 24—(Delayed)—Back from Palermo, where he entered the city only 90 minutes after its surrender, Lt Gen George S Patton, jr, had highest praise to offer today for the foot-slogging soldiers who completed the march to Sicily's leading metropolis in record time

Looking cheerful, even joyous, and dressed in a trim gray uniform, Gen Patton used his typically picturesque phraseology to praise the Doughboys

"I can't give enough credit to the American soldier' he said "He has done great things under appalling conditions—dust canned food and water doctored up to make it pure

'I think the American soher is the greatest of all fighting men It takes him about a year to get mad and when he gets mad, he's mad as hell Anybody who thinks he isn't going to get mad has another think coming"

Gen Patton declined credit for the rapid conquest of Palermo saying he traveled along only as a spectator—not saying he was among the leading elements of armored forces advancing on the city He cited as responsible for successful direction of the Palermo drive Maj Gen Geoffrey Keys deputy commanding general, and the divisional generals concerned

Patton declined to comment further on the Palermo attack. But high official sources at headquarters termed the drive one of the most remarkable in the history of modern war, with some units marching as much as 40 to 60 miles a day.

It was believed the American movement to Palermo surpassed the best accomplishments of the Nazis in speed and the roughness of ground traversed and equalled the Germans' best records for over coming resistance.

Much credit was given at headquarters to divisional commanders for feeling out an enemy soft spot, putting armor through and then taking Palermo from two sides.

German forces, supported by field pieces and anti-tank guns, made four determined efforts to hold up the American advance, but as one spokesman said

'They operated with a marked lack of aptitude and there are quite a few less Germans now than there were then"

recognized as one of the heroes of the battle of Bismarck sea While on night patrol, he located shadowed and participated in the elimination of a 22-ship Japanese convoy—a feat which a communique from General MacArthur's headquarters reported as "a victory of such completeness as to assume the proportions of a major disaster to the enemy"

Italy Must Do the Deciding

HOWEVER it will eventually be accomplished, Italy appears destined to find no easy way back to peace or to escape from penalties of association with Hitlerized Germany.

Whatever may be done now, in meeting the terms of "unconditional surrender" imposed by the Allies, must necessarily be conditioned on the final outcome of the war against Germany, and present hesitancy on the part of Italy to get out of the war seems more inspired by fear of reprisal moves by Hitler than by dread of punishment by the United Nations.

Prime Minister Churchill made it clear in his talk to the house of commons yesterday that the Allies have no intention of taking over an unwilling and disorganized country and assuming responsibility for its maintenance—that this is something for the Italians to work out themselves.

An awkward situation is created by the presence in Italy of a large German military force and an army of Nazi gestapo agents, all of whom would have to be cleared out as a preliminary to surrender, else Italy might continue to be a battleground not unlike that of other occupied countries of Europe and subjected to destructive warfare by both Germany and the Allies.

No cessation of Allied attacks is promised during the period of waiting for action by Mussolini's successors to power in Italy, and the campaign in Sicily is being carried forward with dogged determination to make it as short as possible, but it appears quite unlikely that any further air attack will be made on Rome until time has been given to sift facts from rumors and to learn with some certainty just what the new rulers of Italy propose to do.

Check-up On 'Roots of Delinquency'

ALSO disturbed by an increase in arrests of children under 17, Kansas City has started, through a co-operative movement, "to search for the roots of juvenile delinquency along every street and in every block in the city."

It is explained that, "for the present the city-wide movement will concentrate on sources of trouble. When fully organized throughout all the neighborhoods every side street can have the full picture of its own specific problems."

It will probably be found, as has been the experience elsewhere, that it is easier to locate "sources of trouble" than it is to eliminate them. A survey made in Mansfield a few years ago plainly revealed areas which constitute "danger spots" in the matter of juvenile misconduct, but no serious effort was ever made to correct conditions.

A practical approach to the problem of providing wholesome leisure-time activities, entertainment and recreation for ALL of Mansfield's children—in addition to the Recreation Center project proposed by the Junior Association of Commerce—would be a check-up of present facilities of organizations intended to attract the interest of children and young men and women in various age groups, with a view to disclosing ways in which these organizations can broaden their respective services.

These would include Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Friendly House, Salvation Army, Christian Endeavor societies and Epworth Leagues of various churches, the Order of DeMolay, school and Sunday school classes, and whatever other groups there may be that include membership and participation by children or young men and women.

No one program, or form of entertainment or recreation, is suitable for all children, anymore than one church, fraternal organization or club could be adapted to all adult needs.

'Common Labor' Becomes Uncommon

ROELIF LOVELAND, newspaper writer, says the manpower shortage in his district of northern Ohio isn't so much among the skilled laborers as it is "the so-called but misnamed common laborers—the lads who go through their ordeal of toil and sweat for 70 to 85 cents an hour." He says there are no sissies in foundries. The shake-out man, the chipper, the grinder, the sand blast operator, the rattler operator, the foundry helper and the foundry laborer—these all get hot and sweaty. They are surrounded by dust and smoke. They work hard. Only the strong can take it.

Loveland says he thinks ordinary white-collar folks ought to learn something about how these folks work. Their respect for the foundry people would go up sharply. "It takes an uncommonly good man to stand up to such work," he concludes. "But it will take uncommonly good men to win the war." He might have added that uncommonly good men are already in process of winning it.

The old theory of labor as a commodity is fading in these days. Men work in masses, it is true—but individual initiative and power show up, even on long production lines, and very plainly in foundries.

New Danger To Guard Against

AN IMMENSE amount of ammunition is passing around this country nowadays, on its way from the factories to places where it will do the most good. Also much oil, which itself is really ammunition. Both are highly inflammable and dangerous. They require careful handling, and it is important for people to keep as far away from them as possible.

Collisions may blow up whole train-loads of such war stuff, and have done so in more than one case recently. Monroeville, a quiet country village, was bombarded for several hours recently, as dangerously as if it had been in a war zone. A train-load of oil and explosives caught fire, and the result was a serious wreck. Blazing oil cars spread fire and smoke for a long distance, and exploding shells made it seem as if a battle were raging.

Boys should avoid any sort of meddling around railroad tracks, and it is a good idea for people in general to keep away from them, except those whose work requires it.

MUSSOLINI HAS A "FOLLOWING"

Attention Turns To Balkans As Next Possible Point of Attack

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE SWIFTLY MOVING Allied successes in Russia and Sicily were crowding Herr Hitler into a mighty tight corner even before Mussolini's downfall came to increase the difficulties of the Nazi position.

These widely separated operations strangely enough are creating a squeeze which, irrespective of developments on the Italian mainland, may in due course force the fuehrer to pull back his entire battle-line on the eastern front. This would be one of the greatest withdrawals in history. That line represents more than a thousand miles of defenses which have been buttressed with the bodies of hundreds of thousands of German youth.

The point is, as previously pointed out in this column, that the Nazi chief is compelled to regard the assault on Sicily as the possible forerunner of an Allied drive up through the Balkans. The danger is multiplied by the Italian political upheaval which may result in a separate peace.

An invasion of the Balkans would create a grave threat to the whole German right wing, which already is shaking under the hammering by the Red armies.

Of course, the Anglo-American team has Hitler—and the world, for that matter—guessing as to where they may strike next. Possibly the Allies themselves are keeping open-minds, since a quick surrender of Italy would make the Balkan adventure decidedly more attractive.

Should Marshal Pietro Badoglio withdraw from Yugoslavia and Greece the Italian troops which represent the main Axis defense there (and he is unofficially reported to have issued such an order already), it would open up possibilities which the Allies could scarcely ignore.

In any event, it would be folly for the Nazi gangster to disregard the contingency of an early assault through the Balkans. His hope of avoiding a wholesale readjustment of his hard-won positions in Russia must lie in stalling the western Allies off until the bad autumn weather arrives to impede military operations on the Balkan peninsula. This likely accounts for his orders to his forces in Sicily to fight to the death.

HOWEVER, even if Italy doesn't make a quick surrender and thus end the whole show, the Nazi forces which are cooped up in the northeast corner of Sicily have small chance of holding out long.

With General Montgomery's veteran Eighth army smashing at the German left wing in the vicinity of Catania, and our hard-boiled General Patton's Seventh army advancing on the right flank, it can be only a short time before the Hitlerites collapse.

Should Hitler be compelled to pull back his front in Russia, the first withdrawal presumably would be to the line of the great River Dnieper, which empties into the Black sea at Odessa. That would bring his right wing anchor close to Rumania, which he hopes—undoubtedly with much misgiving—will go on fighting for him and continue to provide the only source of natural oil left to him.

It has been the fuehrer's plan that Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary should stand in the way of an Allied invasion up the Balkans. But his hold on these small satellites was getting shaky even before the collapse of Mussolini.

Fear has kept them fairly well in line, but their courage to revolt has grown stronger as the reich has become weaker. The debacle in Rome will further strengthen their resistance to Hitler.

Thus if the Germans should be compelled to start a withdrawal, it might not stop long at the Dnieper but continue clear back into Poland. Indeed, if the Russians should have the reserve strength to follow the Nazis up, a rout might be produced, for a retreat is a terribly dangerous operation.

WHATEVER develops from the Allied threat to the Balkans, Hitler's failing strength ultimately will force him to move back on all fronts in order to establish a position against concerted attack.

Probably that would have been the smart thing for him to do right after he had raped Poland, instead of trying to conquer the world.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Saturday, July 28, 1923.

President Harding became ill while on special train in California during course of extended western trip. His illness was attributed to ptomaine poisoning.

Fourth annual outing of employes of the Mansfield Sheet & Tin Plate company was held at North park, with attendance of 2,000.

Frank S. Thuma, 66, former Mansfield meat dealer, died.

Letter received from Rufus Tracy jr., told of his climb to the top of Mt. Rainier, Wash.

Mrs. D. H. Harned, 80, died at her home, 435 Springmill street, as result of injuries caused by fall.

Paper balloon sent up by Howard Brown, West Fourth street, was returned to him from Macksburg, near the West Virginia line.

TODAY IN HISTORY

The first national old-age pension was adopted, 150 years ago today, by the French national convention. This was a century before such doles were established elsewhere, and more than a century before Townsend was heard of.

Daily Bible Thought

And He took the seven loaves and the fishes, and gave thanks, and brake them.—Matt. 15:36.

Dave Boone Says:

MUSSOLINI sure played a mean trick on Henry Wallace. Henry was all set to grab the front page with that Detroit speech and Benito had to pick the same day to hog the news.

* * *

The vice president was lucky to get the inside pages. It was one of the worst breaks Henry ever got and if he had any post-war penalty for Mussolini he has doubled it in spades.

* * *

Badoglio has forbidden more than three persons to gather on any one street corner. And he won't allow even one person to gather on a balcony. I predict the complete closing of all balconies in Italy for a decade or more and anybody with a strut is going to be locked up before he gets started. Once was enough.

* * *

I'll bet Hitler sees the handwriting on the wall and is having no trouble translating it into German. He may prohibit handwriting and take over all walls' next.

* * *

One of these days the electric news will be, "Hitler out." It will take a little longer because Adolf has a better grip. (He uses the overlocking) but once the Germans begin to realize what he did to 'em they'll make Benito's exit seem like a study in politeness and good will.

* * *

It's "Lemme check up and see where I am" week with Axis chiefs everywhere, and in all sizes.

ODD FACT

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

WELL, we have discovered why so many people are insulting each other these day.

* * *

It's the Board of War Communications ban on telegrams of felicitation and congratulation.

For instance when Henry Wallace defines an "American Fascist" as anybody who doesn't agree with Wallace, millions of super-heated patriots rush to the telegraph office to wire "You done noble Hen — felicitations and congratulations."

* * *

Millions of anti-Wallace fans rush to the telegraph office to wire "You (one word censored)!"

So what happens?

* * *

So the girl in the telegraph office shifts her gum to the other cheek and says "the war board of communications won't let us accept the telegram of congratulations and felicitations. The other one is all right."

* * *

And there you are. Or rather there is Henry without one teeney weeney telegraphed word of congratulations and felicitations.

* * *

Thought for the day: If it's a knock, don't write—telegraph. If it's a boost, don't telegraph—write.

Popular Demand.

The public's desire to have some light shed on the muddled food situation is reflected in the preponderant sentiment found by the Gallup poll in favor of having a "Baruch committee" investigate the subject.

Confusion over food is as bad now as the turmoil over rubber was a year ago.

Gallup's survey shows that 67 per cent of the persons polled believe there is a need for such an investigation, as against 22 per cent who think it unnecessary and 11 per cent who are undecided.

With such a demand, why doesn't the administration proceed to find three competent and unprejudiced men who can tell us what's what about food?—Akron Beacon Journal.

Army and Navy Slow To Convert Establishments To Save Fuel Oil

WASHINGTON—Last September the war department announced it would convert enough army posts along the Atlantic seaboard from oil to coal to save 15,000,000 gallons of fuel oil per year.

Real fact, however, is that neither the army nor the navy has stirred itself about converting to coal. OPA officials estimate that if the armed forces really wanted to, they could save tons of fuel oil along the Atlantic Coast.

This does not include oil used for fuel in naval vessels. Nor does it include gasoline or oil used for army trucks and tanks. It includes only fuel oil to heat army and navy establishments or to operate army and navy factories.

Both the army and navy get a blank check for oil requirements to be used as they see fit. The OPA has no authority to talk to the armed forces about either conversion or conservation.

Here are some of the requests made by the army for fuel oil within the fiscal year beginning this month: Army Engineers, Atlantic City, 1,980,000 gallons; Army Engineers, Cape May, 1,980,000; Quartermaster Corps, Atlantic City, 938,000; Model City, N. Y., Ordnance Works, 4,943,000; Springfield, Mass., Armory, 2,785,000; Aberdeen Proving Ground, 1,240,000; Watertown, Mass., Arsenal, 6,675,000—plus an extra 2,000,000 for storage.

The navy requirements for fuel oil for next year include: Philadelphia Naval hospital, 1,100,000; Marine Corps Supply Depot Philadelphia, 1,960,000; New York Navy Yard, 4,200,000; Lakehurst Naval Air Station, 1,500,000; Pawtuxent River Naval Air Station, a new establishment, 1,531,000.

Note: Though located in an area where oil is not so scarce as along the Atlantic Seaboard, the War Relocation Authority at Rivera, Ariz., a new establishment for Japanese, has just requested 1,260,000 gallons of fuel oil for the coming year.

Cox Committee Clowning.

CONGRESSMAN Cox's investigation of the Federal Communications commission has degenerated chiefly into a name-calling contest in which Chairman Larry Fly is the main target. Everything that happens, no matter whether it pertains to international affairs or the salary of a stenographer, is blamed on Fly.

Only objector to the antics of the Cox committee is forthright Representative Hart of New Jersey.

The other day Cox's committee counsel, Eugene Garey, started to read a message from J. Edgar Hover, when Cox of Georgia interrupted with a eulogy of Mr. Hoover. He told of his great devotion to the FBI chief, concluding with the remark:

"At one time we wanted to vote a Congressional Medal to Mr. Hoover."

"And I suppose," said Congressman Hart of New Jersey, "that Chairman Fly blocked that too."

Hollywood Sit-Down.

HOLLYWOOD moguls have been staging a polite sit-down strike against the army's training films produced by production ace, Lieut. Col. Frank Capra.

Capra has produced some of the most successful films ever born in Hollywood—"Lost Horizon," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," and "Meet John Doe." He has done equally well in producing films for the army. Although called training films, his pictures are much more than that, comprise a liberal education for any good American.

But Hollywood big-shots, though not actually refusing to show the army's films, schedule them for the tag-end of the show around midnight when the theater is almost empty.

Behind the film sit-down seems to be Hollywood's fear of government encroachment on the motion picture industry.

Five Flying Senators.

THERE was a lot of cloakroom opposition to the trip of the Five Flying Senators to inspect the North African, Australian and Pacific war fronts this summer.

Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri vigorously opposed the investigation, describing it as a "junket trip" to the battlefields, which will be "no public service." Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, who holds the purse-strings on senate investigations as chairman of the audit and control committee, also raised objections. Lucas demanded to know who was paying for the trip.

Majority Leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky replied that the war department was footing expenses. To this Lucas retorted:

"I wish to state emphatically that if any money is to be requested, I will not vote a single dime for the trip."

In reply to further questions by economy-minded GOP Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut about whether "any value attached to the proposed trip," Barkley stated that that would depend on "future events."

"Well, the members of the party making the trip might come back and write a book," suggested Danaher amid laughs.

"It wouldn't be the first time," quipped Barkley. "Another famous American has done the same thing, with apparently fruitful reward."

FDR and Farmers.

FDR'S TESTERS of political opinion for some time have been trying to decide how seriously the president has lost the farm vote. Some of them are convinced that it is the big farm lobbies who are the real leaders against the president and that the great masses of farmers are not.

Here is the way one top-ranking official in the agriculture department, himself a farmer, summarizes the farm lobby battle against FDR:

"All my life," he says, "the farm organizations have been plugging for parity. That has been their slogan: Parity for farm products. Now they have it. Every major product except wheat is selling above parity.

"So the farm organizations are left without an issue. But they can't survive without an issue. They have to have something to battle for, or farmers would not support them.

"So they take up the cry against subsidies. Instead of subsidies, they want farm prices to go higher, which means inflation."

It's a curious comment on U. S. politics that, after ten years of subsidies to farmers from a Democratic administration, the greatest strength of the Republican party is in the farm belt. If Roosevelt and Wallace were to stand for election today in Iowa, on domestic issues, they would lose by a landslide.

Yet the principal argument which farm organizations use against subsidies is that they put the beneficiaries in the pay of the government, and thus strengthen the party in power.

Roving Reporter

Ernie Tells of Axious Hours While Invasion Armada Battled Severe Storm.

WITH THE U. S. NAVY IN THE MEDITERRANEAN—(By Wireless—Delayed)—Now it can be told that we had a couple of horrible moments as we went to invade Sicily.

At the time they both looked disastrous for us but in the end they turned out with such happy endings that it seemed as though fate had deliberately waved her wand and plucked us from doom.

The weather was the cause of the first near-tragedy on the morning of the day on which we were to attack Sicily. That night the weather turned miserable. Dawn came up gray and misty and the sea began to kick up. Even our fairly big ship was rolling and wallowing and the little flat-bottomed landing craft were tossing around like corks.

As the day wore on it grew progressively worse. By noon the sea was rough even to professional sailors. By mid-afternoon it was breaking clear over our decks. By dusk it was absolutely mountainous. The wind howled at 40 miles an hour. You could barely stand on deck and our far spread convoy was a wallowing, convulsive thing.

In the early afternoon the high command aboard our various ships began to wrinkle their brows. They were perplexed, vexed and worried.

The Mediterranean had been like a mill pond for a solid month and now on this vital day this storm had to come up out of nowhere. It could conceivably turn our whole venture into a disaster that would take thousands of lives and prolong the war for months.

High seas and winds like this could cause many things such as:

1. The bulk of our soldiers would hit the beach weak and indifferent from seasickness, two-thirds of their fighting power destroyed.

2. Our slowest barges barely creeping along against the high waves might miss the last rendezvous and arrive too late with their precious armored equipment.

3. High waves would make launching the assault craft from the big transports next to impossible. Boats would be smashed, lives lost, and the attack vastly weakened.

There was a time when it seemed that to avoid complete failure the invasion would have to be postponed 24 hours and we'd have to turn around and cruise for an extra day increasing the chance of being discovered and heavily attacked by the enemy.

I asked our commanders about it. They said, "God knows." They would like to change the plans but it was impossible now. We'd have to go through with it, regardless. (Later I learned that the Supreme High Command did actually consider postponing.)

MANY SHIPS in the fleet carried barrage balloons against an air attack. The quick snap of the ship's deck when it dropped into a trough would tear the high flying balloon loose from it cable. The freed silver bag would soar up and up until finally in the thin, high air it would burst and disappear from view.

One by one we watched the balloons break loose during the afternoon. Scores of them dotted the sky above our convoy. That night when the last light of day failed only three balloons were left in the entire fleet.

In the early afternoon we sent a destroyer back through the fleet to find out how all the ships were getting along. It came back with the appalling news that 30 per cent of all the soldiers were deathly seasick. One army officer had been washed overboard from one craft but picked up by another about four ships behind.

The little sub-chasers and the infantry-carrying assault craft would disappear completely as you watched them. Then the next moment they would be carried so high they seemed to leap clear out of the water. By late afternoon many of the sailors on our vessel were sick. Surely 50 per cent of our troops must have been flat on their backs.

During the worst of the blow we hoped and prayed that the weather would moderate by dusk but it didn't. The officers tried to make jokes about it at supper-time. One said, "Think of hitting the beach tonight, seasick as hell, and with your stomach upside down and the very first thing you come face to face with an Italian with a big, garlic breath!"

At 10 o'clock I lay down with my clothes on. There wasn't anything I could do and the rolling sea was beginning to take nibbles at my stomach, too. I never have been so depressed in my life. I lay there and let the curse of a too-vivid imagination picture a violent and complete catastrophe for America's war effort before another sun rose. The wind was howling and the ship was pounding and falling through space.

* * *

THE NEXT thing I knew a loud voice over the ship's loudspeaker was saying:

"Standby for gunfire. We may have to shoot out some searchlights."

I raised up, startled. The engines were stopped. There seemed to be no wind. The entire ship was quiet as a grave. I grabbed my helmet and ran out onto the deck and stared over the rail. We were anchored and you could see dark shapes in the Sicilian hills not far away. We had arrived. The water lapped with a gentle caressing sound against the sides of the motionless ship.

I looked down and the green surface of the Mediterranean was slick and smooth as a table top. The assault boats already were skimming past us toward the shore. Not a break of air stirred. The miracle had happened.

STILWELL FACES BIG JOB, MUST EQUIP CHINESE

Allies Excellent Fighters But They Have Worst Arms In World.

(By United Press)

CHUNGKING—Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of U. S. forces in China, Burma and India, has a tough job ahead of him—equipping the Chinese army, which has fought the Japanese for six years, and retaining it so that offensive tactics may be utilized to the highest degree.

To most, the task would appear formidable. Stilwell faces the priority claims of Europe and the southwest Pacific, China is at the end of the longest supply line in the world and the Chinese army is probably the most ill-equipped in the world.

But Stilwell considers he holds one ace—he believes the Chinese is "the equal of any soldier in the world. But he must be well trained, well fed, well equipped and commanded by able officers before he will get a chance to prove Stilwell is right.

The average Chinese soldier, if there is sufficient transportation and if the quartermaster has enough supplies, gets two uniforms a year. One is a faded blue cotton padded coat and pants for the winter and the other a suit of cotton shorts and a shirt for summer.

He also gets one undershirt and a knapsack, but no shoes, canteen, blanket, long coat or towel. From his meager salary and allowances — which combined amount to about $3 American per month—he must supplement his daily ration of two pounds of rice per day and one pound of salt per month.

Two dollars and fifty cents Chinese money is allowed him each month for shoes—but grass sandals cost five dollars a pair. So he buys grass and weaves his own shoes.

An attempt was made to outfit the Chinese army with American leather shoes, but the soldiers couldn't stand the confinement and the idea was abandoned.

Some of these Chinese troops have marched thousands of miles from one front to another, staying up all night frequently to dry their clothes, since they had but one outfit. The Chinese army has no tents and in wet weather some of them are able to keep relatively dry by teaming up in the use of a raincoat captured from a Jap or donated by villagers.

The average Chinese soldier wants to fight, but has little or no athletic ability, lacks a sense of timing and his muscular co-ordination is slow.

But in battle it is transformed. He is cautious, fierce, self-reliant fighter.

The American army is trying to train Chinese officers, making them instructors of others, in American ideas and in the use of further equipment.

These are the men General Stilwell hopes to instill with an offensive psychology.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 1943.

Considering the success of his "One World," maybe Wendell Willkie would rather write than be president.

"What has happened in Martinique has much to teach us," observes Walter Lippman. Including a tendency to let other nations solve some of their own problems.

In England anglers are advised that bait coated with lipstick has a special attraction for grayling. Americans knew long ago that lipstick has caught many a poor fish.

Italy Must Do the Deciding

HOWEVER it will eventually be accomplished, Italy appears destined to find no easy way back to peace or to escape from penalties of association with Hitlerized Germany.

Whatever may be done now, in meeting the terms of "unconditional surrender" imposed by the Allies, must necessarily be conditioned on the final outcome of the war against Germany, and present hesitancy on the part of Italy to get out of the war seems more inspired by fear of reprisal moves by Hitler than by dread of punishment by the United Nations.

Prime Minister Churchill made it clear in his talk to the house of commons yesterday that the Allies have no intention of taking over an unwilling and disorganized country and assuming responsibility for its maintenance—that this is something for the Italians to work out themselves.

An awkward situation is created by the presence in Italy of a large German military force and an army of Nazi gestapo agents, all of whom would have to be cleared out as a preliminary to surrender, else Italy might continue to be a battleground not unlike that of other occupied countries of Europe and subjected to destructive warfare by both Germany and the Allies.

No cessation of Allied attacks is promised during the period of waiting for action by Mussolini's successors to power in Italy, and the campaign in Sicily is being carried forward with dogged determination to make it as short as possible, but it appears quite unlikely that any further air attack will be made on Rome until time has been given to sift facts from rumors and to learn with some certainty just what the new rulers of Italy propose to do.

Check-up On 'Roots of Delinquency'

ALSO disturbed by an increase in arrests of children under 17, Kansas City has started, through a co-operative movement, "to search for the roots of juvenile delinquency along every street and in every block in the city."

It is explained that, "for the present the city-wide movement will concentrate on sources of trouble. When fully organized throughout all the neighborhoods every side street can have the full picture of its own specific problems."

It will probably be found, as has been the experience elsewhere, that it is easier to locate "sources of trouble" than it is to eliminate them. A survey made in Mansfield a few years ago plainly revealed areas which constitute "danger spots" in the matter of juvenile misconduct, but no serious effort was ever made to correct conditions.

A practical approach to the problem of providing wholesome leisure-time activities, entertainment and recreation for ALL of Mansfield's children—in addition to the Recreation Center project proposed by the Junior Association of Commerce—would be a check-up of present facilities of organizations intended to attract the interest of children and young men and women in various age groups, with a view to disclosing ways in which these organizations can broaden their respective services.

These would include Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Friendly House, Salvation Army, Christian Endeavor societies and Epworth Leagues of various churches, the Order of DeMolay, school and Sunday school classes, and whatever other groups there may be that include membership and participation by children or young men and women.

No one program, or form of entertainment or recreation, is suitable for all children, anymore than one church, fraternal organization or club could be adapted to all adult needs.

'Common Labor' Becomes Uncommon

ROELIF LOVELAND, newspaper writer, says the manpower shortage in his district of northern Ohio isn't so much among the skilled laborers as it is "the so-called but misnamed common laborers—the lads who go through their ordeal of toil and sweat for 70 to 85 cents an hour." He says there are no sissies in foundries. The shake-out man, the chipper, the grinder, the sand blast operator, the rattler operator, the foundry helper and the foundry laborer—these all get hot and sweaty. They are surrounded by dust and smoke. They work hard. Only the strong can take it.

Loveland says he thinks ordinary white-collar folks ought to learn something about how these folks work. Their respect for the foundry people would go up sharply. "It takes an uncommonly good man to stand up to such work," he concludes. "But it will take uncommonly good men to win the war." He might have added that uncommonly good men are already in process of winning it.

The old theory of labor as a commodity is fading in these days. Men work in masses, it is true—but individual initiative and power show up, even on long production lines, and very plainly in foundries.

New Danger To Guard Against

AN IMMENSE amount of ammunition is passing around this country nowadays, on its way from the factories to places where it will do the most good. Also much oil, which itself is really ammunition. Both are highly inflammable and dangerous. They require careful handling, and it is important for people to keep as far away from them as possible.

Collisions may blow up whole train-loads of such war stuff, and have done so in more than one case recently. Monroeville, a quiet country village, was bombarded for several hours recently, as dangerously as it it had been in a war zone. A train-load of oil and explosives caught fire, and the result was a serious wreck. Blazing oil cars spread fire and smoke for a long distance, and exploding shells made it seem as if a battle were raging.

Boys should avoid any sort of meddling around railroad tracks, and it is a good idea for people in general to keep away from them, except those whose work requires it.

MUSSOLINI HAS A "FOLLOWING"

Attention Turns To Balkans As Next Possible Point of Attack

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE SWIFTLY MOVING Allied successes in Russia and Sicily were crowding Herr Hitler into a mighty tight corner even before Mussolini's downfall came to increase the difficulties of the Nazi position.

These widely separated operations strangely enough are creating a squeeze which, irrespective of developments on the Italian mainland, may in due course force the fuehrer to pull back his entire battle-line on the eastern front. This would be one of the greatest withdrawals in history. That line represents more than a thousand miles of defenses which have been buttressed with the bodies of hundreds of thousands of German youth.

The point is, as previously pointed out in this column, that the Nazi chief is compelled to regard the assault on Sicily as the possible forerunner of an Allied drive up through the Balkans. The danger is multiplied by the Italian political upheaval which may result in a separate peace.

An invasion of the Balkans would create a grave threat to the whole German right wing, which already is shaking under the hammering by the Red armies.

Of course, the Anglo-American team has Hitler—and the world, for that matter—guessing as to where they may strike next. Possibly the Allies themselves are keeping open-minds, since a quick surrender of Italy would make the Balkan adventure decidedly more attractive.

Should Marshal Pietro Badoglio withdraw from Yugoslavia and Greece the Italian troops which represent the main Axis defense there (and he is unofficially reported to have issued such an order already), it would open up possibilities which the Allies could scarcely ignore.

In any event, it would be folly for the Nazi gangster to disregard the contingency of an early assault through the Balkans. His hope of avoiding a wholesale readjustment of his hard-won positions in Russia must lie in stalling the western Allies off until the bad autumn weather arrives to impede military operations on the Balkan peninsula. This likely accounts for his orders to his forces in Sicily to fight to the death.

HOWEVER, even if Italy doesn't make a quick surrender and thus end the whole show, the Nazi forces which are cooped up in the northeast corner of Sicily have small chance of holding out long.

With General Montgomery's veteran Eighth army smashing at the German left wing in the vicinity of Catania, and our hard-boiled General Patton's Seventh army advancing on the right flank, it can be only a short time before the Hitlerites collapse.

Should Hitler be compelled to pull back his front in Russia, the first withdrawal presumably would be to the line of the great River Dnieper, which empties into the Black sea at Odessa. That would bring his right wing anchor close to Rumania, which he hopes—undoubtedly with much misgiving—will go on fighting for him and continue to provide the only source of natural oil left to him.

It has been the fuehrer's plan that Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary should stand in the way of an Allied invasion up the Balkans. But his hold on these small satellites was getting shaky even before the collapse of Mussolini.

Fear has kept them faily well in line, but their courage to revolt has grown stronger as the reich has become weaker. The debacle in Rome will further strengthen their resistance to Hitler.

Thus if the Germans should be compelled to start a withdrawal, it might not stop long at the Dnieper but continue clear back into Poland. Indeed, if the Russians should have the reserve strength to follow the Nazis up, a rout might be produced, for a retreat is a terribly dangerous operation.

WHATEVER develops from the Allied threat to the Balkans, Hitler's failing strength ultimately will force him to move back on all fronts in order to establish a position against concerted attack.

Probably that would have been the smart thing for him to do right after he had raped Poland, instead of trying to conquer the world.

President Harding became ill while on special train in California during course of extended western trip. His illness was attributed to ptomaine poisoning.

TODAY IN HISTORY

The first national old-age pension was adopted, 150 years ago today, by the French national convention. This was a century before such doles were established elsewhere, and more than a century before Townsend was heard of.

Daily Bible Thought

And He took the seven loaves and the fishes, and gave thanks, and brake them.—Matt. 15:36.

Dave Boone Says:

MUSSOLINI sure played a mean trick on Henry Wallace. Henry was all set to grab the front page with that Detroit speech and Benito had to pick the same day to hog the news.

* * *

The vice president was lucky to get the inside pages. It was one of the worst breaks Henry ever got and if he had any post-war penalty for Mussolini he has doubled it in spades.

Badoglio has forbidden more than three persons to gather on any one street corner. And he won't allow even one person to gather on a balcony. I predict the complete closing of all balconies in Italy for a decade or more and anybody with a strut is going to be locked up before he gets started. Once was enough.

* * *

I'll bet Hitler sees the handwriting on the wall and is having no trouble translating it into German. He may prohibit handwriting and take over all walls next.

* * *

One of these days the electric news will be, "Hitler out." It will take a little longer because Adolf has a better grip. (He uses the overlocking) but once the Germans begin to realize what he did to 'em they'll make Benito's exit seem like a study in politeness and good will.

* * *

It's "Lemme check up and see where I am" week with Axis chiefs everywhere, and in all sizes.

ODD FACT

A new type flashlight is designed so that it can be held in the teeth like a pipe, and turned on by a bite, the idea, of course, being to leave both hands free.

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

WELL, we have discovered why so many people are insulting each other these day.

* * *

It's the Board of War Communications ban on telegrams of felicitation and congratulation.

For instance when Henry Wallace defines an "American Fascist" as anybody who doesn't agree with Wallace, millions of super-heated patriots rush to the telegraph office to wire "You done noble Hen — felicitations and congratulations."

* * *

Millions of anti-Wallace fans rush to the telegraph office to wire "You (one word censored)!"

So what happens?

* * *

So the girl in the telegraph office shifts her gum to the other cheek and says "the war board of communications won't let us accept the telegram of congratulations and felicitations. The other one is all right."

* * *

And there you are. Or rather there is Henry without one teeney weeney telegraphed word of congratulations and felicitations.

* * *

Thought for the day: If it's a knock, don't write—telegraph. If it's a boost, don't telegraph—write.

Timely Editorial

Popular Demand.

The public's desire to have some light shed on the muddled food situation is reflected in the preponderant sentiment found by the Gallup poll in favor of having a "Baruch committee" investigate the subject.

Confusion over food is as bad now as the turmoil over rubber was a year ago.

Gallup's survey shows that 67 per cent of the persons polled believe there is a need for such an investigation, as against 22 per cent who think it unnecessary and 11 per cent who are undecided.

With such a demand, why doesn't the administration proceed to find three competent and unprejudiced men who can tell us what's what about food?—Akron Beacon Journal.

Army and Navy Slow To Convert Establishments To Save Fuel Oil

WASHINGTON—Last September the war department announced it would convert enough army posts along the Atlantic seaboard from oil to coal to save 15,000,000 gallons of fuel oil per year.

Real fact, however, is that neither the army nor the navy has stirred itself about converting to coal. OPA officials estimate that if the armed forces really wanted to, they could save tons of fuel oil along the Atlantic Coast.

This does not include oil used for fuel in naval vessels. Nor does it include gasoline or oil used for army trucks and tanks. It includes only fuel oil to heat army and navy establishments or to operate army and navy factories.

Both the army and navy get a blank check for oil requirements to be used as they see fit. The OPA has no authority to talk to the armed forces about either conversion or conservation.

Here are some of the requests made by the army for fuel oil within the fiscal year beginning this month: Army Engineers, Atlantic City, 1,980,000 gallons; Army Engineers, Cape May, 1,980,000; Quartermaster Corps, Atlantic City, 938,000; Model City, N. Y., Ordnance Works, 4,943,000; Springfield, Mass., Armory, 2,785,000; Aberdeen Proving Ground, 1,240,000; Watertown, Mass., Arsenal, 6,675,000—plus an extra 2,000,000 for storage.

The navy requirements for fuel oil for next year include: Philadelphia Naval hospital, 1,100,000; Marine Corps Supply Depot Philadelphia, 1,960,000; New York Navy Yard, 4,200,000; Lakehurst Naval Air Station, 1,500,000; Pawtuxent River Naval Air Station, a new establishment, 1,531,000.

Note: Though located in an area where oil is not so scarce as along the Atlantic Seaboard, the War Relocation Authority at Rivera, Ariz., a new establishment for Japanese, has just requested 1,260,000 gallons of fuel oil for the coming year.

Cox Committee Clowning.

CONGRESSMAN Cox's investigation of the Federal Communications commission has degenerated chiefly into a name-calling contest in which Chairman Larry Fly is the main target. Everything that happens, no matter whether it pertains to international affairs or the salary of a stenographer, is blamed on Fly.

Only objector to the antics of the Cox committee is forthright Representative Hart of New Jersey.

The other day Cox's committee counsel, Eugene Garey, started to read a message from J. Edgar Hover, when Cox of Georgia interrupted with a eulogy of Mr. Hoover. He told of his great devotion to the FBI chief, concluding with the remark:

"At one time we wanted to vote a Congressional Medal to Mr. Hoover."

"And I suppose," said Congressman Hart of New Jersey, "that Chairman Fly blocked that too."

* * *

Hollywood Sit-Down.

HOLLYWOOD moguls have been staging a polite sit-down strike against the army's training films produced by production ace, Lieut. Col. Frank Capra.

Capra has produced some of the most successful films ever born in Hollywood—"Lost Horizon," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," and "Meet John Doe." He has done equally well in producing films for the army. Although called training films, his pictures are much more than that, comprise a liberal education for any good American.

But Hollywood big-shots, though not actually refusing to show the army's films, schedule them for the tag-end of the show around midnight when the theater is almost empty.

Behind the film sit-down seems to be Hollywood's fear of government encroachment on the motion picture industry.

Five Flying Senators.

THERE was a lot of cloakroom opposition to the trip of the Five Flying Senators to inspect the North African, Australian and Pacific war fronts this summer.

Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri vigorously opposed the investigation, describing it as a "junket trip" to the battlefields, which will be "no public service." Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, who holds the purse-strings on senate investigations as chairman of the audit and control committee, also raised objections. Lucas demanded to know who was paying for the trip.

Majority Leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky replied that the war department was footing expenses. To this Lucas retorted:

"I wish to state emphatically that if any money is to be requested, I will not vote a single dime for the trip."

In reply to further questions by economy-minded GOP Senator John A. Danaher of Connecticut about whether "any value attached to the proposed trip," Barkley stated that that would depend on "future events."

"Well, the members of the party making the trip might come back and write a book," suggested Danaher amid laughs.

"It wouldn't be the first time," quipped Barkley. "Another famous American has done the same thing, with apparently fruitful reward."

FDR and Farmers.

FDR'S TESTERS of political opinion for some time have been trying to decide how seriously the president has lost the farm vote. Some of them are convinced that it is the big farm lobbies who are the real leaders against the president and that the great masses of farmers are not.

Here is the way one top-ranking official in the agriculture department, himself a farmer, summarizes the farm lobby battle against FDR:

"All my life," he says, "the farm organizations have been plugging for parity. That has been their slogan: Parity for farm products. Now they have it. Every major product except wheat is selling above parity.

"So the farm organizations are left without an issue. But they can't survive without an issue. They have to have something to battle for, or farmers would not support them.

"So they take up the cry against subsidies. Instead of subsidies, they want farm prices to go higher, which means inflation."

It's a curious comment on U. S. politics that, after ten years of subsidies to farmers from a Democratic administration, the greatest strength of the Republican party is in the farm belt. If Roosevelt and Wallace were to stand for election today in Iowa, on domestic issues, they would lose by a landslide.

Yet the principal argument which farm organizations use against subsidies is that they put the beneficiaries in the pay of the government, and thus strengthen the party in power.

ERNIE PYLE — Roving Reporter

Ernie Tells of Axious Hours While Invasion Armada Battled Severe Storm.

WITH THE U. S. NAVY IN THE MEDITERRANEAN—(By Wireless—Delayed)—Now it can be told that we had a couple of horrible moments as we went to invade Sicily.

At the time they both looked disastrous for us but in the end they turned out with such happy endings that it seemed as though fate had deliberately waved her wand and plucked us from doom.

The weather was the cause of the first near-tragedy on the morning of the day on which we were to attack Sicily. That night the weather turned miserable. Dawn came up gray and misty and the sea began to kick up. Even our fairly big ship was rolling and wallowing and the little flat-bottomed landing craft were tossing around like corks.

As the day wore on it grew progressively worse. By noon the sea was rough even to professional sailors. By mid-afternoon it was breaking clear over our decks. By dusk it was absolutely mountainous. The wind howled at 40 miles an hour. You could barely stand on deck and our far spread convoy was a wallowing, convulsive thing.

In the early afternoon the high command aboard our various ships began to wrinkle their brows. They were perplexed, vexed and worried.

The Mediterranean had been like a mill pond for a solid month and now on this vital day this storm had to come up out of nowhere. It could conceivably turn our whole venture into a disaster that would take thousands of lives and prolong the war for months.

High seas and winds like this could cause many things such as:

1. The bulk of our soldiers would hit the beach weak and indifferent from seasickness, two-thirds of their fighting power destroyed.

2. Our slowest barges barely creeping along against the high waves might miss the last rendezvous and arrive too late with their precious armored equipment.

3. High waves would make launching the assault craft from the big transports next to impossible. Boats would be smashed, lives lost, and the attack vastly weakened.

There was a time when it seemed that to avoid complete failure the invasion would have to be postponed 24 hours and we'd have to turn around and cruise for an extra day increasing the chance of being discovered and heavily attacked by the enemy.

I asked our commanders about it. They said, "God knows." They would like to change the plans but it was impossible now. We'd have to go through with it, regardless. (Later I learned that the Supreme High Command did actually consider postponing.)

* * *

MANY SHIPS in the fleet carried barrage balloons against an air attack. The quick snap of the ship's deck when it dropped into a trough would tear the high flying balloon loose from it cable. The freed silver bag would soar up and up until finally in the thin, high air it would burst and disappear from view.

One by one we watched the balloons break loose during the afternoon. Scores of them dotted the sky above our convoy. That night when the last light of day failed only three balloons were left in the entire fleet.

In the early afternoon we sent a destroyer back through the fleet to find out how all the ships were getting along. It came back with the appalling news that 30 per cent of all the soldiers were deathly seasick. One army officer had been washed overboard from one craft but picked up by another about four ships behind.

The little sub-chasers and the infantry-carrying assault craft would disappear completely as you watched them. Then the next moment they would be carried so high they seemed to leap clear out of the water. By late afternoon many of the sailors on our vessel were sick. Surely 50 per cent of our troops must have been flat on their backs.

During the worst of the blow we hoped and prayed that the weather would moderate by dusk but it didn't. The officers tried to make jokes about it at suppertime. One said, "Think of hitting the beach tonight, seasick as hell, and with your stomach upside down and the very first thing you come face to face with an Italian with a big, garlic breath!"

At 10 o'clock I lay down with my clothes on. There wasn't anything I could do and the rolling sea was beginning to take nibbles at my stomach, too. I never have been so depressed in my life. I lay there and let the curse of a too-vivid imagination picture a violent and complete catastrophe for America's war effort before another sun rose. The wind was howling and the ship was pounding and falling through space.

* * *

THE NEXT thing I knew a loud voice over the ship's loudspeaker was saying:

"Standby for gunfire. We may have to shoot out some searchlights."

I raised up, startled. The engines were stopped. There seemed to be no wind. The entire ship was quiet as a grave. I grabbed my helmet and ran out onto the deck and stared over the rail. We were anchored and you could see dark shapes in the Sicilian hills not far away. We had arrived. The water lapped with a gentle caressing sound against the sides of the motionless ship.

I looked down and the green surface of the Mediterranean was slick and smooth as a table top. The assault boats already were skimming past us toward the shore. Not a break of air stirred. The miracle had happened.

STILWELL FACES BIG JOB, MUST EQUIP CHINESE

Allies Excellent Fighters But They Have Worst Arms In World.

(By United Press)

CHUNGKING—Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of U. S. forces in China, Burma and India, has a tough job ahead of him—equipping the Chinese army, which has fought the Japanese for six years, and retaining it so that offensive tactics may be utilized to the highest degree.

To most, the task would appear formidable. Stilwell faces the priority claims of Europe and the southwest Pacific, China is at the end of the longest supply line in the world and the Chinese army is probably the most ill-equipped in the world.

But Stilwell considers he holds one ace—he believes the Chinese is "the equal of any soldier in the world. But he must be well trained, well fed, well equipped and commanded by able officers before he will get a chance to prove Stilwell is right.

The average Chinese soldier, if there is sufficient transportation and if the quartermaster has enough supplies, gets two uniforms a year. One is a faded blue cotton padded coat and pants for the winter and the other a suit of cotton shorts and a shirt for summer.

He also gets one undershirt and a knapsack, but no shoes, canteen, blanket, long coat or towel. From his meager salary and allowances — which combined amount to about $3 American per month—he must supplement his daily ration of two pounds of rice per day and one pound of salt per month.

Two dollars and fifty cents Chinese money is allowed him each month for shoes—but grass sandals cost five dollars a pair. So he buys grass and weaves his own shoes.

An attempt was made to outfit the Chinese army with American leather shoes, but the soldiers couldn't stand the confinement and the idea was abandoned.

Some of these Chinese troops have marched thousands of miles from one front to another, staying up all night frequently to dry their clothes, since they had but one outfit. The Chinese army has no tents and in wet weather some of them are able to keep relatively dry by teaming up in the use of a raincoat captured from a Jap or donated by villagers.

The average Chinese soldier wants to fight, but has little or no athletic ability, lacks a sense of timing and his muscular co-ordination is slow.

But in battle it is transformed. He is cautious, fierce, self-reliant fighter.

The American army is trying to train Chinese officers, making them instructors of others, in American ideas and in the use of further equipment.

These are the men General Stilwell hopes to instill with an offensive psychology.

Help Child Improve His Reading

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

From the first grade through college, most school failures are reading failures. Most of the book learning of the first two grades consists of reading. Beyond the fourth grade, content subjects like history, geography and science are chiefly reading subjects. Even success in arithmetic and higher mathematics presuppose skillful reading.

To help a child or youth improve in school learning is, as a rule, to help him read better. Youths, therefore, who wish to prepare themselves this summer to do better school work next winter, will try to improve their reading skill.

Excepting the very few children who cannot read at all, or have poor vision, there really are no poor readers. What we call poor readers are just poor readers for the kind of materials they are supposed to read. The poor reader in college or high school may be a very good reader from a book no harder than a standard reader for the fourth or fifth grade.

The poor reader in the fourth or fifth grade may read very well from a primer or first reader. For him to make best gains in reading skills, have him practice on reading matter no harder than he can read with ease and understanding. When any person must stumble over one or several words in every sentence he is reading something too difficult for him. He must get the satisfaction from success to learn best. He should also feel that what he is reading is worthy of his effort.

It is not easy to find good materials for the older child and youth to fit these two requirements. The average reading book easy enough in vocabulary for the first grade child is too infantile in content to appeal to the poor reader of the fifth grade, and the book easy enough for the average fifth grade child rarely has much grown-up appeal.

When, however, a poor reader in the upper grade, high school or college will read to a child under six to entertain this child, the older person reading feels unashamed to read from easy materials, and has about the best possible exercise for improving his own reading skill.

I have written two special bulletins, "Home Helps For Poor Readers," Part I, for the child under ten or 12; Part II, for older children and adults. Each may be had without cost by writing me in care of this paper enclosing a three-cent stamp on a self-addressed envelope. Several thousand parents already have written for these.

In the home, a skillful parent should be able to induce a poor reader, however old he be, to practice reading silently and aloud from books or magazines easy enough to be enjoyed by him. There the poor reader can save his face and avoid shame. I wish parents would keep these simple facts and principles in mind if divided, some, deploring the fact they have a son or daughter who is a poor reader.

Letters for Service Men By Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
The other day I heard a radio commentator say that the wives of service men were to be provided with maternity care for themselves and infants. Does that apply to wives of officers? My husband is a second lieutenant and I am going to have a baby in a month or so and would like to know where to apply for this assistance, if I am eligible.
A MOTHER-TO-BE.

Maternity care for wives of men in certain non-commissioned grades in naval and military service is provided without cost to the family through state health departments, under arrangements made by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor. This service is not provided to wives of officers.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
When a married man joins the navy and takes out a $10,000 insurance policy, naming his wife and parents as beneficiaries, will two policies be issued, or do they put all names on one policy for the entire amount?
ALICE K.

If the soldier desires, he may apply for two $5,000 policies, and make his wife beneficiary on one of them, and his parents on the other. Or, if he wishes to apply for one policy of $10,000 and make his wife and parents joint beneficiaries, that is all right too. It is at the discretion of the soldier.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
How long does a soldier have to serve to be entitled to government benefits, such as hospitalization or medical attention? Is there any kind of emblem or button an ex-soldier can wear to show he has been in the army? Can a man over 38 years enlist?
H. E. M.

Immediately upon induction, the soldier is entitled to medical care. After honorable discharge from the army, he may be eligible for veterans' benefits—hospitalization, domiciliary care, or medical attention—each case is judged on its own merits. An ex-soldier may wear a badge of service, purchased by him from an authorized dealer in military supplies, upon presentation of his honorable discharge papers. Yes, in certain cases. Apply to the nearest recruiting office for details.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
At what time may an ex-soldier wear his uniform, if any? When discharged, a soldier is given certain clothing. May he sell this clothing as he wishes?
M.

An ex-soldier may wear his uniform for one month after the date of his honorable discharge, but must always have with him, his discharge papers. When peace is declared, he may wear his uniform at veterans' rallies, parades, etc. If he is careful that the clothing does not fall into the hands of anyone who might use it illegally—to pose as a member of the army—he may sell it. When his month, allowed a soldier to wear his uniform after honorable discharge, has expired, he may wear parts of the issue to augment his civilian clothes, if necessary, or he so desires.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
My husband is in the army and is now overseas. I would like to know if I am privileged to trade at an army commissary or is it possible to get a card through the post exchange, which will entitle me to reductions on purchases made at privately owned stores?
ARMY WIFE.

The wife of a man in the army may purchase subsistence and other articles at the commissary or the post exchange if these goods are for her own use. Post exchange arrangements with privately owned retail stores vary widely. In some communities, retail stores make reductions to persons showing post exchange cards. Others give "preferential treatment" to such card holders and sometimes, in the past, retail civilian stores have extended credit on the basis of such card holding.

Recipe for Vegetable Sandwiches

By BETSY NEWMAN

For dishes to serve for lunch now the children are home from school, to pack into lunch boxes or for the picnic in the nearby park or in the backyard, we can find a multitude of foods, but sometimes it seems we have tried them all and there is nothing new. I'll give you a few suggestions.

Today's Menu.

Sandwiches or Meat Turnovers
Pickles or Raw Carrots or Tomatoes
Fruit: Apples, Oranges, Bananas, Fresh Berries
Cup Cakes Milk, Tea or Coffee

Vegetable Sandwiches.

Raw Carrots
Chopped celery
Chopped cabbage
Chopped green pepper
Coarsely chopped peanuts
Whole wheat, rye or Boston brown bread

Grind carrots, mix with other vegetables, moisten with a little softened butter, cream or salad dressing and spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Watercress and Hard-Cooked Egg Sandwich.

Chop watercress and mix with a little creamed butter or cottage cheese, spread on slice of buttered bread. Slice hard-cooked egg on top and cover with another slice of buttered bread.

Meat Turnovers or Rolls.

Biscuit dough
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper or olives
1 to 2 cups ground cooked meat
Milk or cream to moisten

Prepare biscuit dough, using 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, blend in ¼ cup fat; add ⅔ cup milk to make a soft, but not sticky dough. Turn onto lightly floured board and knead for 20 seconds. Roll out fairly thin, spread with meat mixture, roll up like jelly roll or place on squares of dough, top with sliced, hard-cooked eggs (may be omitted), and bake at 425 degrees F. Cut in slices when serving. Or fold dough over filling, press edges together, prick to prevent blistering. Bake as above until well browned and baked through.

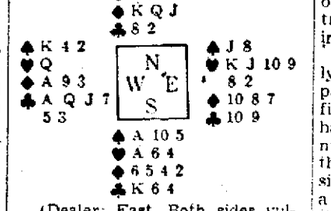
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TELL WHEN TO PLAY IT

Killing the dummy's suit, and thus annihilating the declarer's chance to make his contract, hinges often on the question of exactly when you play your one winner in that suit. If you do it too soon, he can return to the dummy and run the suit. If too late, you let him gain a trick which could have been safely prevented, and in addition may allow him a valuable chance to lead from the dummy toward a finesse in his own hand. So in such a crisis, watch your partner's cards carefully for clues which may guide your decision.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	3 NT

West would have been sounder, of course, if he had bid only 2-No Trumps, leaving leeway for East to bid a mere 3-Hearts, if he felt that was necessary, and then dropping the bidding there at a contract which could be made even against a diamond lead. But perhaps West knew his opponents. Anyway, his bidding produced a game, with their help.

North opened the spade 6, South taking the 8 with the A and returning the 10, the Q dropping the J, and the 3 then forced the K. The Q of hearts was led and overtaken by dummy's K. South felt properly that his job was to block those hearts, so to save his A for that purpose, he put on the 4. West then led the club 10 for a finesse, next the 9 to the Q and then the A, killing the K. He went on then in clubs to make his contract, with six club tricks and one in the other suits.

South should have looked closely when West led the heart 6, as his partner played the 3 on it. Among fine players, a high-low would have been given if North had any number of cards except exactly three. Hence that 3 was either a singleton or bottom of three. If a singleton, West would have had three and doubtless would have supported the hearts. So it was surely bottom of three. If South had figured thus, he would have played his A at once and slaughtered the contract four tricks thereby. The 3 should have told him West's heart Q was a singleton.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"What can I do for you?" the housekeeper asked briskly, and I knew that my telltale face had betrayed my astonishment and anxiety.

"One thing of great importance," I told her promptly. "Will it be possible for you to arrange so that if that number calls Room 1720, I can be notified before the other connection is made, and be switched on so that I can listen in on the conversation."

"Of course," she answered promptly, "but I can't do it myself. Just wait a moment!"

She turned to the telephone again and issued a peremptory command.

"Have Dickson come up here immediately," she said.

"He's one of the house dicks," she explained. "He knows about this, and he'll do anything that's necessary.' But it isn't necessary for him to see your disguise. You'd better go into the bathroom when he knocks."

A Tap At the Door.

A slight, almost soundless, tap on the door started me across the floor, but the housekeeper stopped me, as a middle-aged maid unlocked the door and came into the room.

"I find I won't need you, Annie, for another five minutes," said the housekeeper, as the woman's eyes flashed over my face and figure with the curiosity of an employe seeing a newcomer to the staff. "Go over to 1756—that's vacant—and stay there until I call you back."

"All right," the woman responded, and went away.

The housekeeper turned to me again.

"Better leave the door a little ajar," she said; "just enough so you can hear," and when the next knock came—a loud, business-like one this time—I hurried into the bathroom and listened "with all my ears" to what the housekeeper was saying.

"Dickson," she said, "you know of course, about this Federal job of watching a certain person that's being pulled off here this morning?"

"I ought to," Dickson growled. "We've been on our toes all morning about it."

"Well, here's something I want you to do. The woman next door in 1720, who just checked in, has given instructions that she's not to be disturbed until she's called at 10:30, unless this number calls."

She repeated the number and added the request I had made.

"Sure thing," the detective replied. "I'll go down and tip the operators off immediately. Let me see if I have the dope right. If that number calls in, switch this room on before the connection with 1720 is made, so the person here can hear everything?"

"That's right," the housekeeper said, and the man answered with an "Okay," and then I heard the sound of the door closing.

"The coast is clear," she called, and I came back into the room.

"You can relax," she told me. "Not a syllable will be uttered over the telephone at 1720 that you won't hear in here."

"Thank you so much," I said, and she took down the telephone receiver once more.

Summons Annie.

"1756," she directed, and an instant later she said crisply: "Annie? Come over quickly."

"Now," she said, "there's no reason for Annie to know anything except that you're a new maid who is pretty green—we've had to take on a lot of inexperienced ones lately, so she won't suspect anything—and I'll tell her that I want her to show you the ropes. I'll stay here so she won't ask you every question under the sun, and you'll be able to study her. Then, when you think you're ready, put your hands up and adjust your cap. A few minutes later, I'll dismiss her, and put you through a drill, which I don't think will have to be either long or hard. Oh, by the way, I'll have to give Annie a name for you.

"I might as well use my own," I said, smiling with a remembrance of the teasing Dicky sometimes gives me. "It is Margaret, although I am often called Madge But—"

"You don't mind being Maggie, do you?" she suggested.

Bed-making Routine.

"I think that will be perfect," I replied, and a minute later, after Annie's entrance, kept my face straight with difficulty, as the housekeeper said: "Annie, this is Maggie, and I want you to show her everything about the way we take care of a room. First, she will stand over here while you strip that bed and treat this room as if it were a check-out. Then make it up again. After that, she'll try it, and you must show her where she makes mistakes. All ready now. Got at it, Maggie, be sure you watch Annie carefully. We can't spend too much time training, you know."

Her tone was not unkind, but had a touch of steel in it. And I did not feel that I was acting a role when I said, "I'll try hard, Ma'am," for I was obsessed with the desire to get through with my "training" and get Annie out of the room before that possible summons to "listen in" should come.

CHAPTER XI

"You would. Why don't you join the Salvation Army? Little sister of the slums . . ." He shook his head as if to clear it of murky thoughts. "The trouble with a good night is the bad morning that follows. Tomorrow I'll hate my guts."

Meegan bit her lip. But she said it any way. "Toby, don't get mixed up with Clare."

"You don't get mixed up with Clare. You get tangled up. 'Come into my parlor, said the spider to the fly.' And there you are. You like it and you don't like it. You feel with your head . . . not think with it."

He put the car in the garage and they walked toward the dark house together. Inside he stumbled up the steps, giggled and then, recovering his dignity, walked up with stiff legs.

It seemed to Meegan that she could not reach her room quickly enough to close the door . . . as if closing the door and being alone solved everything.

Intermittent rain, hailed by the farmers on the mainland and regarded with disgust by the sun-loving islanders, kept Meegan rather closely at home. Though it interfered with her taking the children to the beach and playing tennis with Adele it did not, however, interfere in the least with Toby's social life or rather her mother's daily bridge game. She wondered how Toby could drive blithely off to Clare's knowing how high the weeds were about the house and how her mother could enjoy her bridge with greasy dishes hidden in the stove. She wondered, too, as she pulled up the wet weeds and looked for the hidden dishes why she was the only one who read the papers and thought about the war.

For Toby was always with Clare, but not alone with her. A stream of house guests came and went, filling the road with their cars and keeping the lights in the house burning late. It was an endless party and to Toby, whistling, wisecracking, happy again, the best possible way of life. Meegan had not been to the house since her first visit despite her mother's insistence that she was not being very friendly toward Clare. She could not tell her that she had a dread of the place and that even looking at it from her bedroom window it was, despite the life and color and excitement there, as a house haunted to her. She could not forget the faded face of Miss Willoughby nor Fayne's diplomatic pretense that he did not know what existed between his wife and Toby.

One wet morning she was driving to the mainland for groceries and saw Jimmy, one of the caddies and a farmer's son, walking along the road seemingly oblivious of the downpour. Knowing him since he had been scarcely as high as a golf bag, she opened the car and called to him to get in.

"Gee, thanks," he said, scurrying for shelter, his brown eyes smiling from his wet face. "I thought it was gonna clear up this morning and there'd be folks out to play. Ain't it ever gonna stop rainin'?"

"You'll get a cold," Meegan said. "Why didn't you wait for it to stop?"

"Aw, I got things to do for my pigeons."

As the car approached Clare's house, Jimmy turned a serious face to her.

"Say, is somebody in there nuts?"

"Where?"

"In there," he said pointing to Clare's house. "One day last week I was walkin' up here and I heard screamin' and yellin' . . . A lady screamin' and yellin' . . . Made my blood run cold. I thought maybe somebody was fightin' but it didn't keep up and I didn't hear no more . . . Gee, it sounded like somebody was gettin' killed . . ."

"What day was it?"

"I don't know. I don't remember."

"Was it on Saturday or Sunday? Fayne was home on weekends."

"No, ma'am. I know it wasn't Saturday or Sunday."

"What time was it?"

"Well, must have been around nine. That's the time I go by on week days. On Saturdays and Sundays I go by earlier."

"It probably wasn't anything, Jimmy." But she wondered. A woman's piercing scream . . . Perhaps it had been one of the maids. Miss Willoughby had endured too much pain to cry out against it. She would suffer with clenched teeth, not with a cry. It could have been only one of the maids or Clare . . .

"No, kiddin' . . . I think somebody in there is nuts," Jimmy said.

She asked him about his pigeons and they talked very earnestly about pigeons until she deposited him at his doorstep where his mother met him with a warm coat.

Later driving back to the island the rain stopped and the sun came out and she saw Erica in neat blue slacks cutting flowers in the garden. Meegan waved and Erica, straightening, waved also and smiled. But she did not smile as though Meegan had mistaken her identity and Meegan's heart lifted. Erica, standing among the flowers, her dark hair falling about her face, was happy because at least someone had waved and smiled at her. That was one of the little things one could so easily and thoughtlessly overlook, Meegan thought. The little things you can do for other people to lift their hearts and color their whole day.

She was learing, she thought. By being poor and lonely she was learning a great many things and making astounding discoveries about herself and other people. Perhaps the compensations for being poor and lonely were increased appreciation and your habit of projecting yourself into another person so as to understand him better and the growth of your spiritual life. On the other hand, you were neither poor nor lonely when you knew true appreciation and understanding and when you were conscious of a spiritual life. Actually you had been incredibly poor and lonely without them.

Driving along the muddy road, her hair blowing, her brown legs wet, her yellow sweater clinging to her moist body, she felt an unexpected spurt of happiness. The sun was shining and the wet grass was lifting its face to it; the dark clouds were scattering. There was no accounting for nice moments like this. There need be no accounting. It was simply the wonder and joy of being alive in green, rolling country slowly emerging from the rain.

She was alone in the house that night. Toby never explained where he was going but her mother had gone to a late movie in a nearby village with a woman friend. Adele had called, her rough, kind voice suggesting tennis the next morning if it did not rain again. Meegan said that she would love to play and Adele did not mention Clare. Perhaps she was 'saving it up' for the morrow when there would be no alien listeners on the telephone.

She had gone downstairs to look for a book when the telephone rang again and she was startled to hear Toby's voice ask excitedly and sharply, "Meegan?"

"Yes, Toby."

"Is Mother there?"

"No. She went to a movie with Irene."

"Good. Now listen to me, listen carefully . . . I'm calling from a store, the connection is bad and I can't be very explicit. But there's something you've got to do for me . . . I want you to go down to Clare's and get Fayne out of the house for an hour or so . . . I don't care where you take him but keep him out of the house for an hour or more. That's all I can tell you now."

"Clare is with you . . ."

He said in an annoyed tone, "Sure, sure. Now please don't ask questions. This is imperative. If you knew the circumstances, you'd gladly do it."

"I do know, Toby. I have to save your face again. I won't do it. I can't help what you do but I won't help you do it."

"Oh, my God, you don't understand! But if you don't do it . . . I won't come home. I mean it, Meegan. I won't come home!"

And if Toby did not come home, her mother would simply cease to live . . . And he knew it. He was using his best weapon to hit her in the most vulnerable spot. But the lies, the subterfuge!

She said, "All right. For an hour."

"Try to make it longer. I've got to have time to get Clare home." Then he said, obviously relieved, "Thanks . . . thanks . . . That's all. You're a good kid. Good-bye."

She continued to stand in the hall beside the telephone, aware that time was passing and that she was doing nothing except remembering the desperation in Toby's voice. It had been almost panicky. But why? Why could not Toby drop off Clare at her house and then come home? Fayne need not see Toby or know with whom Clare had been. Besides, it was perfectly obvious that Fayne was accustomed to Clare's freedom and her going about with other men. And why was Fayne at home on Wednesday evening?

But she could not stand here asking questions of a silent house . . . She had to get her coat, her old camel hair coat, and walk down to Fayne and get him out of his house. And she was no good at acting and her imagination failed her completely . . .

She put on her coat over the wrinkled blue linen frock and left the house, locking the door and then dropping the key in her coat pocket.

SEE U. S. AIRLINES BOOSTING POSTWAR TRADE IN HEMISPHERE

By LAWRENCE S. HAAS
(UP Latin American Editor)

United States airline developments in the inter-American service after the war will contribute a tremendous lift to trade among the Pan-American countries, according to airline officials.

They are confident that with a multiplication of schedule frequencies, with the use of great planes that today exist in the blueprints and yesterday were but designers' dreams, and the expansion of national airlines in virtually all the Latin-American countries, air travel and freight carriage will exceed anything the average layman can visualize today.

At present United States airline (Pan American Airways and Pan American Grace Airways), with their affiliates, fly 51,715 route miles in Latin America. All other lines fly a total of about 33,000 route miles, according to unofficial estimates.

The other lines include one Chilean, one Venezuelan, one Bolivian, five Brazilian, three Argentine, two Peruvian and two Uruguayan lines, plus domestic lines in Mexico, the "TACA" (operated over Central American and certain South American and Antillian routes by Lowell Yerex(a New Zealander), and the Dutch "KLM" line.

Less than 15 years ago there was little or no commercial flying in the Latin-American countries. Rapid airways progress was made once lines were established, but recently the war has hampered acquisition of material and limited trained operational, maintenance and supervisory personnel.

The average Latin - American businessman, professional and private traveler became air-minded perhaps in a greater degree and much faster than the North American. This was due to the fact that communications on the ground have never been developed in Latin America on anything like the scale in the United States. The neighboring American countries have had insufficient highways, and in many instances deficient railway facilities.

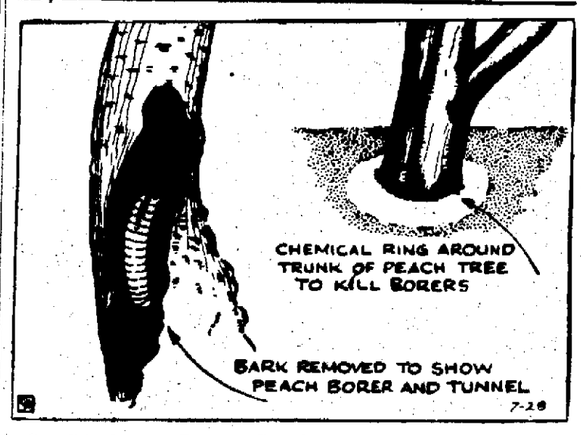
When the Latin American found that he could travel over difficult terrain by air, he accepted the new medium in a gratified but matter-of-fact fashion. In areas of some countries there was an abrupt transition from horse and muleback and lumbering oxcart to the 20-passenger plane.

Inter - American airways developments are not likely to affect comprehensive road building programs such as are under way or planned for the Pan-American highway and other arteries of surface travel. There is no prospect of serious competition for railway and steamer freight business, but airway and highway lines will be certain to make a strong bid for passenger express and light freight traffic.

The picture for the future of air traffic over Latin America envisages improved airfields and airports. It includes a widespread network of flying routes over Central and South America and the Antilles, criss-crossing great territories and sea stretches in a series of interlacing systems, connecting capitals, industrial, agricultural and mining areas.

Expansion of national lines in Latin America should give United States business a new field for trade. The national airlines would be in the market for such products as gasoline, lubricating oils, runway materials, construction material for plant and hangars, servicing machinery, flying and testing instruments and subsidiary devices.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Gas Warfare to Protect Peach Trees In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Assn.)

Although gas warfare has thus far been outlawed in the present war, Victory gardeners may have to resort to it to protect peach trees against borers. The most serious insect enemy of the peach tree in the Victory garden, or elsewhere, is the peach borer. This insect may girdle and shorten the life of the tree.

Peach borers winter over in the worm stage on the trunks of peach trees, penetrating deeper into the bark as they become larger. The accompanying Garden-Graph shows a section of the trunk of a peach tree with the bark removed to reveal a mature borer in the deep tunnel it has channeled.

To control such borers place crystals of paradichlorobenzene on the surface of the soil around the trunk of an infected tree during the fall, as illustrated in the Garden-Graph. Despite war shortages these crystals can still be obtained in small quantities or they may be had in department stores, where they are sold under various names for the control of moths.

For a tree under three years of age use one-half ounce of the crystals. From three to six years, use three-quarters ounce, and for older trees, one to one and a half ounces. Place the crystals in a ring around the tree, as illustrated, keeping them one inch back from the bark, yet not farther away than three inches. Cover the crystals with soil to confine the gas.

WARNS BRIDES

CHICAGO —(INS)— Lack of a common ground of understanding is the cause of breaking up many war marriages, Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall, director of the Association for Family Living, warned today.

Real happiness in marriage must be based on friendship and mutual respect, Mrs. Duvall said.

There was a day when American airplanes charged at Japan in a bombing that will never be forgotten. No one knew how or when the planes that carried those bombs reached their taking-off place. Our president referred to their base as a mid-ocean Shangri-La . . . We are now readying for more and greater bombings of Japan. This time, the "Shangri-La" will be an actuality . . . so, hurry up and . . .

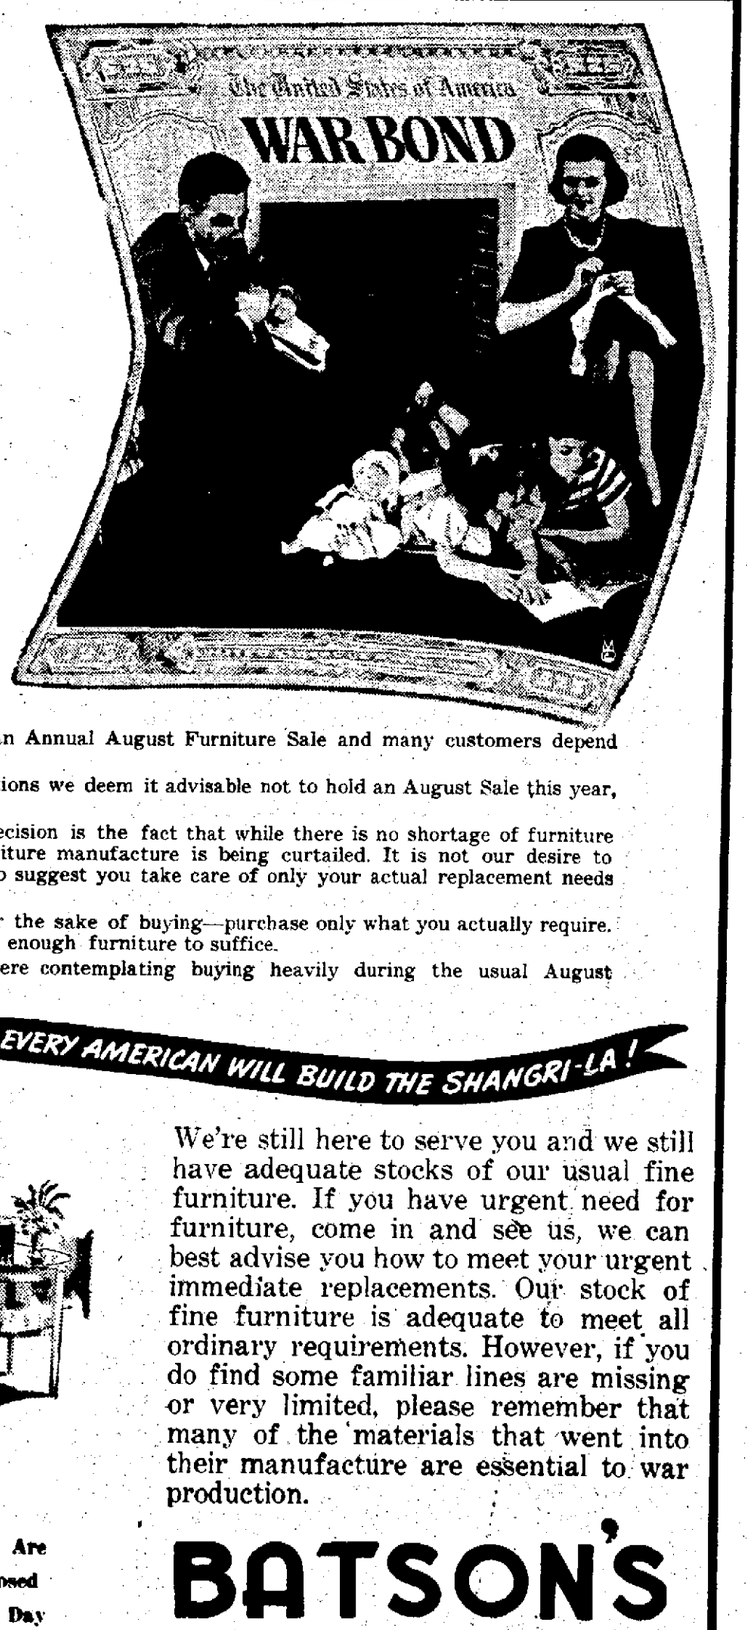
We Picture A Better Home For Tomorrow!

Through your purchase of war bonds regularly today, you will be providing for the kind of better home you will want to enjoy in the better world we will build through Victory over our enemies.



SORRY---BUT NO August Furniture Sale THIS YEAR!

It has been our custom to hold an Annual August Furniture Sale and many customers depend on it.

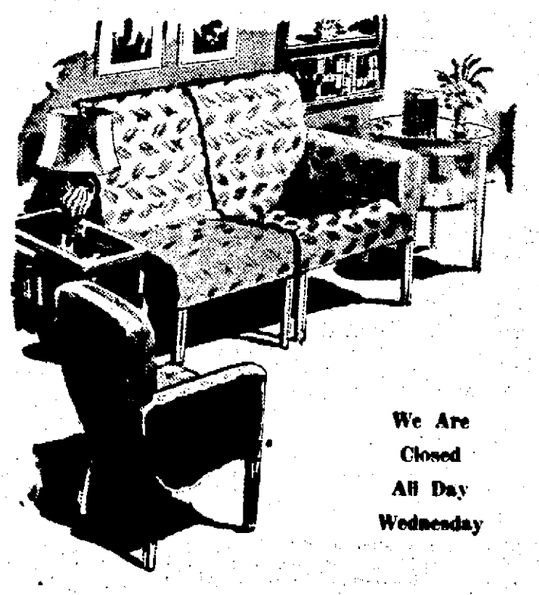
However under wartime conditions we deem it advisable not to hold an August Sale this year, or any year till Victory is won.

Among the reasons for our decision is the fact that while there is no shortage of furniture for needed replacements . . . furniture manufacture is being curtailed. It is not our desire to cause the smallest alarm . . . but to suggest you take care of only your actual replacement needs for the duration.

Don't buy furniture merely for the sake of buying—purchase only what you actually require. For this there will be more than enough furniture to suffice.

If you have extra money or were contemplating buying heavily during the usual August Sales, put it in WAR BONDS now!

$1.00 IN WAR STAMPS FROM EVERY AMERICAN WILL BUILD THE SHANGRI-LA!



We're still here to serve you and we still have adequate stocks of our usual fine furniture. If you have urgent need for furniture, come in and see us, we can best advise you how to meet your urgent immediate replacements. Our stock of fine furniture is adequate to meet all ordinary requirements. However, if you do find some familiar lines are missing or very limited, please remember that many of the materials that went into their manufacture are essential to war production.
